SYNOPSIS OF SCENES

ACT ONE
Brighton Beach, Brooklyn, New York
September 1937—6:30 p.m.

ACT TWO
Wednesday, a week later
About 6:30 in the evening
ACT ONE
Brighton Beach, New York. September 1937. A wooden frame house, not too far from the beach. It is a lower-middle-income area inhabited mostly by Jews, Irish and Germans.

The entrance to the house is to the right: a small porch and two steps up that lead to the front door. Inside we see the dining room and living-room area. Another door leads to the kitchen... A flight of stairs leads up to three small bedrooms. Unseen are two other bedrooms. A hallway leads to other rooms...

It's around six-thirty and the late-September sun is sinking fast. KATE JEROME, about forty years old, is setting the table. Her sister, BLANCHE MORTON, thirty-eight, is working at a sewing machine. LAURIE MORTON, aged thirteen, is lying on the sofa reading a book.

Outside on the grass stands EUGENE JEROME, almost but not quite fifteen. He is wearing knickers, a shirt and tie, a faded and torn sweater, Keds sneakers and a blue baseball cap. He has a beaten and worn baseball glove on his left hand, and in his right hand he holds a softball that is so old and battered that it is ready to fall apart.

On an imaginary pitcher's mound, facing left, he looks back over his shoulder to an imaginary runner on second, then back over to the "batter." Then he winds up and pitches, hitting an offstage wall.

EUGENE One out, a man on second, bottom of the seventh, two balls, no strikes... Ruffing checks the runner on second, gets the sign from Dickey, Ruffing stretches, Ruffing pitches—(He throws the ball) Caught the inside corner, steerike one! Atta baby! No hitter up there. (He retrieves the ball) One out, a man on second, bottom of the seventh, two balls, one strike... Ruffing checks the runner on second, gets the sign from
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

Dickey, Ruffing stretches, Ruffing pitches—(He throws the ball) Low and outside, ball three. Come on, Red! Make him a hitter! No batter up there. In there all the time, Red.

BLANCHE (Stops sewing) Kate, please. My head is splitting.

KATE I told that boy a hundred and nine times. (She yells out) Eugene! Stop banging the wall!

EUGENE (Calls out) In a minute, Ma! This is for the World Series! (Back to bis game) One out, a man on second, bottom of the seventh, three balls, one strike . . . Ruffing stretches, Ruffing pitches—(He throws the ball) Oh, no! High and outside, JoJo Moore walks! First and second and Mel Ott lopes up to the plate . . .

BLANCHE (Stops again) Can’t he do that someplace else?

KATE I’ll break his arm, that’s where he’ll do it. (She calls out) Eugene, I’m not going to tell you again. Do you hear me?

EUGENE It’s the last batter, Mom. Mel Ott is up. It’s a crucial moment in World Series history.

KATE Your Aunt Blanche has a splitting headache.

BLANCHE I don’t want him to stop playing. It’s just the banging.

LAURIE (Looks up from her book) He always does it when I’m studying. I have a big test in history tomorrow.
ACT ONE

EUGENE  One pitch, Mom? I think I can get him to pop up. I have my stuff today.

KATE  Your father will give you plenty of stuff when he comes home! You hear?

EUGENE  All right! All right!

KATE  I want you inside now! Put out the water glasses.

BLANCHE  I can do that.

KATE  Why? Is his arm broken? (She yells out again) And I don’t want any back talk, you hear? (She goes back to the kitchen)

EUGENE  (Slams the ball into his glove angrily. Then be cups his hand, making a megaphone out of it and announces to the grandstands) “Attention, ladies and gentlemen! Today’s game will be delayed because of my Aunt Blanche’s headache . . .”

KATE  Blanche, that’s enough sewing today. That’s all I need is for you to go blind.

BLANCHE  I just have this one edge to finish . . . Laurie, darling, help your Aunt Kate with the dishes.

LAURIE  Two more pages, all right, Ma? I have to finish the Macedonian Wars.

KATE  Always studying, that one. She’s gonna have some head on her shoulders. (She calls out from the kitchen) Eugene!!

EUGENE  I’m coming.
KATE And wash your hands.

EUGENE They're clean. I'm wearing a glove. (He throws the ball into his glove again... then he looks out front and addresses the audience) I hate my name! Eugene Morris Jerome... It is the second worst name ever given to a male child. The first worst is Haskell Fleischmann... How am I ever going to play for the Yankees with a name like Eugene Morris Jerome? You have to be a Joe... or a Tony... or Frankie... If only I was born Italian... All the best Yankees are Italian... My mother makes spaghetti with ketchup, what chance do I have?

(He slams the ball into his glove again)

LAURIE I'm almost through, Ma.

BLANCHE All right, darling. Don't get up too quickly.

KATE (To Lauriel You have better color today, sweetheart. Did you get a little sun this morning?

LAURIE I walked down to the beach.

BLANCHE Very slowly, I hope?

LAURIE Yes, Ma.

BLANCHE That's good.

EUGENE (Turns to the audience again) She gets all this special treatment because the doctors say she has kind of a flutter in her heart... I got hit with a baseball right in the back of the skull, I saw two of everything for a week and I still had to carry a block of ice home every afternoon... Girls are treated like queens. Maybe that's what I should have been born—an Italian girl...
ACT ONE

KATE (Picks up a sweat sock from the floor) EUGENE!!

EUGENE What??

KATE How many times have I told you not to leave your things around the house?

EUGENE A hundred and nine.

KATE What?

EUGENE You said yesterday, "I told you a hundred and nine times not to leave your things around the house."

BLANCHE Don't be fresh to your mother, Gene!

EUGENE (To the audience) Was I fresh? I swear to God, that's what she said to me yesterday . . . One day I'm going to put all this in a book or a play. I'm going to be a writer like Ring Lardner or somebody—that's if things don't work out first with the Yankees, or the Cubs, or the Red Sox, or maybe possibly the Tigers . . . If I get down to the St. Louis Browns, then I'll definitely be a writer.

LAURIE Mom, can I have a glass of lemonade?

BLANCHE It'll spoil your dinner, darling.

KATE A small glass, it couldn't hurt her.

BLANCHE All right. In a minute, angel.

KATE I'll get it. I'm in the kitchen anyway.

EUGENE (To the audience) Can you believe that? She'd better have a bad heart or I'm going to kill her one day . . . (He gets up to walk into the house, then stops on the porch steps and turns to the audience again . . . confi-
Listen, I hope you don’t repeat this to anybody . . . What I’m telling you are my secret memoirs. It’s called, “The Unbelievable, Fantastic and Completely Private Thoughts of I, Eugene Morris Jerome, in this, the fifteenth year of his life, in the year nineteen hundred and thirty-seven, in the community of Brighton Beach, Borough of Brooklyn, Kings County, City of New York, Empire State of the American Nation—”

KATE (Comes out of the kitchen with a glass of lemonade and one roller skate) A roller skate? On my kitchen floor? Do you want me dead, is that what you want?

EUGENE (Rushes into the house) I didn’t leave it there.

KATE No? Then who? Laurie? Aunt Blanche? Did you ever see them on skates? (She holds out the skate) Take this upstairs . . . Come here!

EUGENE (Approaches, holding the back of his head) Don’t hit my skull, I have a concussion.

KATE (Handing the glass to Laurie) What would you tell your father if he came home and I was dead on the kitchen floor?

EUGENE I’d say, “Don’t go in the kitchen, Pa!”

KATE (Swings at him, be ducks and she misses) Get upstairs! And don’t come down with dirty hands.

EUGENE (Goes up the stairs. He turns to the audience) You see why I want to write all this down? In case I grow up all twisted and warped, the world will know why.
ACT ONE

BLANCHE (Still sewing) He’s a boy. He’s young. You should be glad he’s healthy and active. Before the doctors found out what Laurie had, she was the same way.

KATE Never. Girls are different. When you and I were girls, we kept the house spotless. It was Ben and Ezra who drove Momma crazy. (We see EUGENE, upstairs, enter his room and take out a notebook and pencil and lie down on his bed, making a new entry in his “memoirs”)

. . . I’ve always been like that. I have to have things clean. Just like Momma. The day they packed up and left the house in Russia, she cleaned the place from top to bottom. She said, “No matter what the Cossacks did to us, when they broke into our house, they would have respect for the Jews.”

LAURIE Who were the Cossacks?

KATE The same filthy bunch as live across the street.

LAURIE Across the street? You mean the Murphys?

KATE All of them.

LAURIE The Murphys are Russian?

BLANCHE The mother is nice. She’s been very sweet to me.

KATE Her windows are so filthy, I thought she had black curtains hanging inside.

BLANCHE I was in their house. It was very neat. Nobody could be as clean as you.

KATE What business did you have in their house?

BLANCHE She invited me for tea.

KATE  To meet that drunken son of hers?

BLANCHE  No. Just the two of us.

KATE  I'm living here seven years, she never invited me for tea. Because she knows your situation. I know their kind. Remember what Momma used to tell us. “Stay on your own side of the street. That's what they have gutters for.”

(She goes back into the kitchen)

EUGENE (Writing, says aloud)  “That's-what-they-have-gutters-for” . . . (To the audience)  If my mother knew I was writing all this down, she would stuff me like one of her chickens . . . I'd better explain what she meant by Aunt Blanche's “situation.” You see, her husband, Uncle Dave, died six years ago from (He looks around) this thing . . . They never say the word. They always whisper it. It was (He whispers)—cancer! I think they're afraid if they said it out loud, God would say, “I HEARD THAT! YOU SAID THE DREAD DISEASE! (He points his finger down) JUST FOR THAT, I SMITE YOU DOWN WITH IT!!” . . . There are some things that grownups just won't discuss. For example, my grandfather. He died from (He whispers)—diphtheria! Anyway, after Uncle Dave died, he left Aunt Blanche with no money. Not even insurance. And she couldn't support herself because she has (He whispers)—asthma . . . So my big-hearted mother insisted we take her and her kids in to live with us. So they broke up our room into two small rooms, and me and my brother Stan live on this side, and Laurie and her sister Nora live on the other side. My father thought it would just be temporary, but it's been three and a half years so far and I think because of Aunt Blanche's situation, my father is developing (He whispers)—high blood pressure!
ACT ONE

(He resumes his writing)

KATE (Comes out of the kitchen with a pitcher and says to LAURIE) Have some more lemonade, dear.

LAURIE (Sits up) Thank you, Aunt Kate.

BLANCHE Drink it slowly.

LAURIE I am.

KATE (Looks at BLANCHE) Blanche, that's enough already. Since seven o'clock this morning.

BLANCHE I was just stopping.

KATE You'll sew your fingers together.

BLANCHE It's getting dark anyway. (She stops, sits back and rubs her eyes) I think I need new glasses.

LAURIE Our teacher said you should change them every two years.

KATE (To BLANCHE) Would it kill you to put a light on?

BLANCHE I don't have to run up electric bills. I owe you and Jack enough as it is.

KATE Have I asked you for anything? You see anybody starving around here? If I go hungry, you'll give me something from your plate.

BLANCHE Kate! I'm going to pay you and Jack back someday. I don't know when, but I keep my word.
KATE  From your lips to the Irish Sweepstakes ... Go in and taste the soup. See if it needs salt.
(Blanche goes into the kitchen)

Laurie  Should I put out the water glasses or is Eugene going to do it?
(Eugene, having heard, slams his "memoirs" shut angrily)

KATE (Yells up)  EUGENE! It's the last time I'm going to tell you! (To Laurie) Just do the napkins, darling.
(She goes into the kitchen. Laurie gets up and starts to set out the napkins)

Eugene (Sits up on his bed and addresses the audience)
Because of her "condition," I have to do twice as much work around here. Boy, if I could just make the Yankees, I'd be in St. Petersburg this winter ... (He starts out and down the stairs) Her sister Nora isn't too bad. She's sixteen. I don't mind her much. (He is downstairs by now) At least she's not too bad to look at. (He starts taking down some glasses from the open cupboard) To be absolutely honest, this is the year I started noticing girls that weren't too bad to look at. Nora started developing about eight months ago ... I have the exact date written in my diary.
(Suddenly we hear a voice. It is Nora)

Nora  Mom! Laurie! Aunt Kate! (We see Nora, an absolutely lovely sixteen-and-a-half-year-old girl, with a developed chest, bound across the front steps and into the house. She is bubbling over with enthusiasm) I've got incredible news, everybody!!
ACT ONE

EUGENE  Hi, Nora!

NORA  Eugene! My sweet adorable handsome cousin! Wait'll I tell you what's happened to me. (She throws her arms around him, hugs him close and kisses his cheek. Then she rushes into the other room to LAURIE) I'm fainting! I'm absolutely fainting!

EUGENE (Still stunned from the hug, turns to the audience) I felt her chest! When she grabbed me, I felt my first chest.

NORA  I can't believe this whole day!

LAURIE  What happened?

NORA  Where's Mom? Aunt Kate? I have to tell everyone. (She rushes to the kitchen door) Everybody inside for the big news!

(KATE and BLANCHE come out of the kitchen. KATE is mashing potatoes in a pot)

KATE  What's all the excitement?

BLANCHE  You're all red in the face.

NORA  Sit down, Mom, because I don't want you fainting on the floor.

KATE  Sit down, Blanche.

LAURIE  Mom, sit down.

(BLANCHE sits)

NORA  You too, Aunt Kate. Okay. Is everybody ready?

LAURIE  Stop dragging it out. The suspense is killing me.
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

BLANCHE  Don't say things like that, Laurie.

KATE (To the others)  Can I hear what the girl has to say?
(To Nora)  Go ahead, darling.

NORA (A little breathless)  Okay! Here goes! . . . I'm going to be in a Broadway show! (They look at her in a stunned silence) It's a musical called Abracadabra. This man, Mr. Beckman, he's a producer, came to our dancing class this afternoon and he picked out three girls. We have to be at the Hudson Theater on Monday morning at ten o'clock to audition for the dance director. But on the way out he took me aside and said the job was as good as mine. I have to call him tomorrow. I may have to go into town to talk to him about it. They start rehearsing a week from Monday and then it goes to Philadelphia, Wilmington and Washington . . . and then it comes to New York the second week in December. There are nine big musical numbers and there's going to be a big tank on the stage that you can see through and the big finale all takes place with the entire cast all under water . . . I mean, can you believe it? I'm going to be in a Broadway show, Momma!

(They are all still stunned)

BLANCHE (To Kate)  What is she talking about?

KATE  Do I know? Am I her mother?

LAURIE  How can you be in a show? Don't you have to sing and act?

NORA  I can sing.

LAURIE  No, you can't.

14
ACT ONE

NORA    A little.

LAURIE  No, you can't.

NORA    I can carry a tune.

LAURIE  No, you can't.

NORA    Well, I probably won't have to. They're just looking for dancers.

LAURIE  On Broadway you have to sing and act.

NORA    How do you know? You never saw a Broadway show.

BLANCHE Did you tell him how old you were?

NORA    He didn't ask me.

BLANCHE He didn't ask if you were sixteen?

NORA    He just asked me to audition. My God, isn't anybody excited?

EUGENE    I am. It's the most fantastic thing I ever heard.

NORA    Thanks, Eugene. I'm glad somebody's excited.

EUGENE (Turns to the audience)  My God! I'll be sleeping right next door to a show girl!

BLANCHE How can you go to Philadelphia? What about school?

NORA    School? Momma, this is a Broadway show. This is what I want to do with my life. Algebra and English isn't going to help me on the stage.

LAURIE  Aren't?
NORA Will you stay out of this!

BLANCHE You mean not finish school? Not get a diploma? Do you know how hard it is today for a girl to get a good job without a high school diploma?

NORA But I've got a job. And I'll be making more money than ten girls with diplomas.

LAURIE You don't have it yet. You still have to audition.

NORA It's as good as mine. Mr. Beckman told me.

BLANCHE And what if you, God forbid, broke a leg? Or got heavy . . . How long do you think they'll keep you? Dancing is just for a few years. A diploma is forever. I know. I never had one. I know how hard it is to find a decent job. Aunt Kate knows. Tell her, Kate.

KATE It's very hard.

NORA Then why did you send me to dancing school for three years? Why do I spend two hours a day on a subway, four days a week after school, with money that you make going half blind over a broken sewing machine? Why, Momma?

BLANCHE Because it's my pleasure . . . Because I know how you love it . . . Because you asked me.

NORA Then I'm asking you something else, Momma. Let me do something for you now. I could be making almost sixty dollars a week. Maybe even more . . . In two years when I get out of high school, I wouldn't make that much with a college diploma.
ACT ONE

BLANCHE (Takes a deep breath) I can’t think now. It’s almost dinnertime. Uncle Jack will be home soon. We’ll discuss it later.
(She gets up)

NORA I have to know now, Momma. I have to call Mr. Beckman and let him know if I can go to the audition on Monday . . . At least let me audition. Let me find out first if they think I’m good enough. Please don’t say no until Monday.
(They all look at BLANCHE. She looks down at her hands)

EUGENE (Turns toward the audience) It was a tense moment for everybody . . . I love tense moments! Especially when I’m not the one they’re all tense about.
(He turns back and looks at BLANCHE)

BLANCHE Well, God knows we can use the money. We all owe Aunt Kate and Uncle Jack enough as it is . . . I think they have as much say in this as I do. How do you feel about it, Kate?

KATE ( Shrugs) Me? I never voted before in my life, why should I start with my own family? . . . I have to heat up the potatoes.
(She goes into the kitchen)

BLANCHE Then we’ll leave it up to Uncle Jack. We’ll let him make the decision.
(She starts for the kitchen)

NORA Why, Momma? I love him but he’s not my father.

BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

BLANCHE Because I need help. Because I don’t always know what the right thing to do is ... Because I say so, that’s why.

(She goes into the kitchen, leaving LAURIE and EUGENE standing there staring at the forlorn NORA)

EUGENE Eugene M. Jerome of New York casts one vote for “yes.” (NORA looks up at him, breaks into tears and runs out of the room and up the stairs. LAURIE follows her up. He turns toward the audience) What I’m about to tell you next is so secret and private that I’ve left instructions for my memoirs not to be opened until thirty years after my death ... I, Eugene M. Jerome, have committed a mortal sin by lusting after my cousin Nora. I can tell you all this now because I’ll be dead when you’re reading it ... If I had my choice between a tryout with the Yankees and actually seeing her bare breasts for two and a half seconds, I would have some serious thinking to do ...

KATE (Comes out of the kitchen) I need bread.

EUGENE (Turns quickly) What?

KATE I don’t have enough bread. Run across the street to Greenblatt’s and get a fresh rye bread.

EUGENE Again? I went to the store this morning.

KATE So you’ll go again this afternoon.

EUGENE I’m always going to the store. When I grow up, that’s all I’ll be trained to do, go to the store.

KATE You don’t want to go? ... Never mind, I’ll go.

18
ACT ONE

EUGENE  Don't do that! Don't make me feel guilty. I'll go.

KATE   And get a quarter pound of butter.

EUGENE  I bought a quarter pound of butter this morning. Why don't you buy a half pound at a time?

KATE   And suppose the house burned down this afternoon? Why do I need an extra quarter pound of butter? (She goes back into the kitchen)

EUGENE (Turns toward the audience) If my mother taught logic in high school, this would be some weird country.

(He runs out of the house to Greenblatt's. Our attention goes to the two girls upstairs in their room. NORA is crying. LAURIE sits on the twin bed opposite her, watching)

LAURIE  So? What are you going to do?

NORA    I don't know. Leave me alone. Don't just sit there watching me.

LAURIE  It's my room as much as yours. I don't have to leave if I don't want to.

NORA    Do you have to stare at me? Can't I have any privacy?

LAURIE  I'm staring into space. I can't help it if your body interferes. (There is a pause) I bet you're worried?

NORA    How would you feel if your entire life depended on what your Uncle Jack decided? ... Oh, God, I wish Daddy were alive.
LAURIE  He would have said “No.” He was really strict.

NORA  Not with me. I mean, he was strict but he was fair. If he said “No,” he always gave you a good reason. He always talked things out . . . I wish I could call him somewhere now and ask him what to do. One threeminute call to heaven is all I ask.

LAURIE  Ask Mom. She talks to him every night.

NORA  Who told you that?

LAURIE  She did. Every night before she goes to bed. She puts his picture on her pillow and talks to him. Then she pulls the blanket halfway up the picture and goes to sleep.

NORA  She does not.

LAURIE  She does too. Last year when I had the big fever, I slept in bed with the both of them. In the middle of the night, my face fell on his picture and cut my nose.

NORA  She never told me that . . . That’s weird.

LAURIE  I can’t remember him much anymore. I used to remember him real good but now he disappears a little bit every day.

NORA  Oh, God, he was so handsome. Always dressed so dapper, his shoes always shined. I always thought he should have been a movie star . . . like Gary Cooper . . . only very short. Mostly I remember his pockets.

LAURIE  His pockets?

NORA  When I was six or seven he always brought me home a little surprise. Like a Hershey or a top. He’d tell me to go get it in his coat pocket. So I'd run to the closet and put my hand in and it felt as big as a tent. I wanted to crawl in there and go to sleep. And there were all these terrific things in there, like Juicy Fruit gum or Spearmint Life Savers and bits of cellophane and crumbled pieces of tobacco and movie stubs and nickels and pennies and rubber bands and paper clips and his gray suede gloves that he wore in the winter-time.

Laurie With the stitched lines down the fingers. I remember.

Nora Then I found his coat in Mom's closet and I put my hand in the pocket. And everything was gone. It was emptied and dry-cleaned and it felt cold . . . And that's when I knew he was really dead. (She thinks for a moment) Oh, God, I wish we had our own place to live. I hate being a boarder. Listen, let's make a pact . . . The first one who makes enough money promises not to spend any on herself, but saves it all to get a house for you and me and Mom. That means every penny we get from now on, we save for the house. We can't buy anything. No lipstick or magazines or nail polish or bubble gum. Nothing . . . Is it a pact?

Laurie (Thinks) What about movies?

Nora Movies too.

Laurie Starting when?

Nora Starting today. Starting right now.

Laurie Can we start Sunday? I wanted to see The Thin Man.
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

NORA  Who's in it?

LAURIE  William Powell and Myrna Loy.

NORA  Okay. Starting Sunday . . . I'll go with you Saturday.

(They shake hands, sealing their “pact,” then both lie down in their respective beds and stare up at the ceiling, contemplating their “future home.”)

EUGENE returns with a paper bag containing the milk and butter under his arm. He stops, pretends to be a quarterback awaiting the pass from center. The bread is his football)

EUGENE  Sid Luckman of Columbia waits for the snap from center, the snow is coming down in a near blizzard, he gets it, he fades back, he passes (He acts all this out)—AND LUCKMAN’S GOT IT! LUCKMAN CATCHES HIS OWN PASS! HE’S ON THE FIFTY, THE FORTY, THE THIRTY, THE TWENTY . . . IT’S A TOUCHDOWN! Columbia wins! They defeat the mighty Crimson of Harvard, thirteen to twelve. Listen to that crowd!

(He roars like a crowd . . .)

KATE (Comes out of the kitchen. She yells out)  EUGENE! STOP THAT YELLING! I HAVE A CAKE IN THE OVEN!

(She goes back into the kitchen. STANLEY JEROME appears. STAN is eighteen and a half. He wears slacks, a shirt and tie, a zip-up jacket and a cap)

STAN (In half whisper)  Hey! Eugie!
ACT ONE

EUGENE Hi, Stan! (To the audience) My brother Stan. He’s okay. You’ll like him. (To stan) What are you doing home so early?

STAN (Looks around, lowers his voice) Is Pop home yet?

EUGENE No . . . Did you ask about the tickets?

STAN What tickets?

EUGENE For the Yankee game. You said your boss knew this guy who could get passes. You didn’t ask him?

STAN Me and my boss had other things to talk about. (He sits on the steps, his head down, almost in tears) I’m in trouble, Eug. I mean, really big trouble.

EUGENE (To the audience) This really shocked me. Because Stan is the kind of guy who could talk himself out of any kind of trouble. (To stan) What kind of trouble?

STAN I got fired today!

EUGENE (Shocked) Fired? You mean for good?

STAN You don’t get fired temporarily. It’s permanent. It’s a lifetime firing.

EUGENE Why? What happened?

STAN It was on account of Andrew. The colored guy who sweeps up. Well, he was cleaning the floor in the stockroom and he lays his broom against the table to put some junk in the trash can and the broom slips, knocks a can of linseed oil over the table and ruins three brand-new hats right out of the box. Nine-dollar Stetsons. It wasn’t his fault. He didn’t put the linseed oil there, right?

EUGENE  Right.

STAN  So Mr. Stroheim sees the oily hats and he gets crazy. He says to Andrew the hats are going to have to come out of his salary. Twenty-seven dollars. So Andrew starts to cry.

EUGENE  He cried?

STAN  Forty-two years old, he’s bawling all over the stockroom. I mean, the man hasn’t got too much furniture upstairs anyway, but he’s real sweet. He brings me coffee, always laughing, telling me jokes. I never understand them but I laugh anyway, make him feel good, you know?

EUGENE  Yeah?

STAN  Anyway, I said to Mr. Stroheim I didn’t think that was fair. It wasn’t Andrew’s fault.

EUGENE (Astounded)  You said that to him?

STAN  Sure, why not? So Mr. Stroheim says, “You wanna pay for the hats, big mouth?” So I said, “No. I don’t want to pay for the hats.” So he says, “Then mind your own business, big mouth.”

EUGENE  Holy mackerel.

STAN  So Mr. Stroheim looks at me like machine-gun bullets are coming out of his eyes. And then he calmly sends Andrew over to the factory to pick up three new hats. Which is usually my job. So guess what Mr. Stroheim tells me to do?
ACT ONE

EUGENE What?

STAN He tells me to sweep up. He says, for this week I'm the cleaning man.

EUGENE I can't believe it.

STAN Everybody is watching me now, waiting to see what I'm going to do. (EUGENE nods in agreement) Even Andrew stopped crying and watched. I felt the dignity of everyone who worked in that store was in my hands. So I grit my teeth and I pick up the broom, and there's this big pile of dirt right in the middle of the floor . . .

EUGENE Yeah?

STAN . . . and I sweep it all over Mr. Stroheim's shoes. Andrew had just finished shining them this morning, if you want to talk about irony.

EUGENE I'm dying. I'm actually dying.

STAN (Enjoying himself) You could see everyone in the place is about to bust a gut. Mrs. Mulcahy, the bookkeeper, can hardly keep her false teeth in her mouth. Andrew's eyes are hanging five inches out of their sockets.

EUGENE This is the greatest story in the history of the world.
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

STAN So Mr. Stroheim grabs me and pulls me into his back office, closes the door and pulls down the shades. He gives me this whole story how he was brought up in Germany to respect his superiors. That if he ever—(With an accent) “did soch a ting like you do, dey would beat me in der kopf until dey carried me avay dead.”

EUGENE That’s perfect. You got him down perfect.

STAN And I say, “Yeah. But we’re not in Germany, old buddy.”

EUGENE You said that to him?

STAN No. To myself. I didn’t want to go too far.

EUGENE I was wondering.

STAN Anyway, he says he’s always liked me and always thought I was a good boy and that he was going to give me one more chance. He wants a letter of apology. And that if the letter of apology isn’t on his desk by nine o’clock tomorrow morning, I can consider myself fired.

EUGENE I would have had a heart attack . . . What did you say?

STAN I said I was not going to apologize if Andrew still had to pay for the hats . . . He said that was between him and Andrew, and that he expected the letter from me in the morning . . . I said good night, walked out of his office, got my hat and went home . . . ten minutes early.
ACT ONE

EUGENE I’m sweating. I swear to God, I’m sweating all over.

STAN I don’t know why I did it. But I got so mad. It just wasn’t fair. I mean, if you give in when you’re eighteen and a half, you’ll give in for the rest of your life, don’t you think?

EUGENE I suppose so . . . So what’s the decision? Are you going to write the letter?

STAN (Thinks) . . . No!

EUGENE Positively?

STAN Positively. Except I’ll have to discuss it with Pop. I know we need the money. But he told me once, you always have to do what you think is right in this world and stand up for your principles.

EUGENE And what if he says he thinks you’re wrong? That you should write the letter.

STAN He won’t. He’s gonna leave it up to me, I know it.

EUGENE But what if he says, “Write the letter”?

STAN Well, that’s something we won’t know until after dinner, will we?

(He walks into the house)

EUGENE (Looks after him, then turns to the audience) All in all, it was shaping up to be one heck of a dinner. I’ll say this though—I always had this two-way thing about my brother. Either I worshiped the ground he walked on or I hated him so much I wanted to kill him
... I guess you know how I feel about him today.

(He walks into the house as Kate comes out of the kitchen carrying a water pitcher for the table. Stan has stopped to look at the small pile of mail)

Kate (To Eugene) All day it takes to bring home bread?
Give Aunt Blanche the butter, she's waiting for it.

Eugene I was home a half-hour ago. I was talking to Stan.

(He goes into the kitchen)

Stan Hey, I got a letter from Rosalyn Weiner. Remember her? She moved to Manhattan. They live up on Central Park West.

Kate Why not? Her father's a gangster, her mother is worse. I don't get a kiss "Hello"?

Stan Nope. I was going to save it up and give you a giant one for Christmas.

Kate We don't have Christmas. I'll take it now, thank you. (He puts his arms around her and kisses her warmly, then embraces her) A hug too? When do I ever get a hug from you? You must have done something wrong.

Stan You're too smart for me, Mom. I robbed a barbershop today.

Kate Is that why you look so tired? You don't get enough sleep. Running around all night with your two hundred girl friends.

Stan A hundred and thirty. That's all I have, a hundred and thirty.
ACT ONE

KATE How do you get any work done?

STAN I get it done.

KATE And your boss doesn’t say anything to you? About being tired?

STAN About being tired? No. He doesn’t. (He starts toward the stairs)

KATE Did you ask him about Thursday?

STAN What?

KATE You were going to ask him about getting paid this Thursday so I can pay Greenblatt’s on Friday. Saturday is a holiday.

STAN Oh. No. I forgot . . . I’ll ask him tomorrow.

KATE If it’s a problem, don’t ask him. Greenblatt can wait. Your boss is more important.

STAN That’s not true, Mom. My boss isn’t any more important than Mr. Greenblatt.

(He goes upstairs and on to his room, where he lies down, tries to read his letter, then puts it down and stares up at the ceiling wondering about his predicament.)

EUGENE bursts out of the kitchen and practically staggers out of the house. He sits on the steps, his head down, looking very disconsolate. He addresses the audience)

EUGENE Oh, God! As if things weren’t bad enough . . . and now this! The ultimate tragedy . . . liver and cabbage for dinner! A Jewish medieval torture! . . .
friend Marty Gregorio, an A student in science, told me that cooked cabbage can be smelled farther than sound traveling for seven minutes. If these memoirs are never finished, you'll know it's because I gagged to death one night in the middle of supper. (We suddenly hear a crash of broken dishes in the kitchen. Eugene turns toward the sound, then to the audience) You're all witnesses. I was sitting here, right? But I'll get blamed for that, anyway.

(The kitchen door opens and Kate comes out helping Blanche, who is wheezing and gasping quite badly. She can't catch her breath)

Blanche  I'm all right. Just let me sit a minute.

Kate  Didn't I tell you to get out of that hot kitchen? I can't breathe in there and I don't have asthma. (She calls out) Nora! Laurie! Come help your mother!!

(Nora and Laurie jump up from their beds)

Blanche  I'm sick about the plates. I'll replace them. Don't worry about the plates.

Kate  Plates I can always get. I only have one sister.

(The girls have come down the stairs)

Nora  What happened?

Blanche  I'm all right. Don't run, Laurie.

Kate  It's another asthma attack. It's the second one this week. Nora, maybe you'd better get the doctor.

Blanche  I don't need doctors . . .

Kate  This is no climate for you, near the beach. What you need is someplace dry.
ACT ONE

LAURIE Like Arizona, Momma.

NORA Should I get the doctor?

BLANCHE No. No doctors. It’s better. It’s going away.

LAURIE I can still hear the whistle.

NORA Will you shut up!

BLANCHE (To NORA) Help Aunt Kate in the kitchen, Nora. I broke her good plates.

KATE Never mind—Eugene will do it. You go up and get your mother’s medicine . . . Laurie, you sit there quiet and watch your mother. You look pale as a ghost. Eugene!

EUGENE and KATE Come in here and help me!

JACK (Offstage) Hello, Mrs. Kresky, how are you?

EUGENE (Gets up, looks off down the street) In a minute, Ma. Pop’s home!

LAURIE (Sits next to her mother. To the audience) I would now like to introduce my father, a real hard worker. He was born at the age of forty-two . . . Hi, Pop! How you doin’, Pop?

(JACOB “JACK” JEROME appears, a man about forty, who could pass for older. He wears a wrinkled suit, brown felt hat and black shoes. The Brooklyn Eagle sticks up out of his side coat pocket. He carries two large and very heavy cardboard boxes, tied around with hemp cord. He appears to be very tired)

JACK How am I doin’?
Eugene  Let me carry these for you, Pop.
       (He reaches for one of the boxes)

Jack  They're too heavy, you'll hurt yourself.

Eugene  No. I can do it easy. (He takes one of the boxes, tries to lift it. It weighs a ton) Ugh! I just have to get a good grip.
       (Jack stops and sits. He wipes his forehead with a bandkerchief and holds his chest)

Jack  I want to sit a few minutes.

Eugene  Are you okay, Pop?

Jack  I'm resting, that's all . . . Get me a glass of cold water.

Eugene  (Struggles with the first box toward the house)  I'll be out for the other box in a minute, Pop. (To the audience) I don't know how he does it. King Kong couldn't lift these . . . You know what's in here? Noise-makers and party favors. Pop sells them to night clubs and hotels after he gets through every day with his regular work, which is cutting material for ladies' raincoats.

Jack  Did you do your homework today?

Eugene  Not all of it. Mom sent me to the store fifteen times. Amos 'n' Andy is on tonight.

Jack  Do your homework, then we'll discuss Amos 'n'
Andy.
       (Eugene continues into the house as Nora comes down the stairs with her mother's medicine)
ACT ONE

NORA Here's your medicine, Mom. Laurie, go get some water.

BLANCHE Laurie shouldn't be running.

EUGENE (The hero) I'll get it, Nora.

NORA You sure you don't mind?

EUGENE No. No trouble at all. (To the audience) Two and a half seconds, that's all I ask. (He goes into the kitchen)

NORA (To blanche) When are you going to speak to Uncle Jack, Mom?

BLANCHE When I speak to him, that's when I'll speak to him.

NORA Tonight? I have to know tonight.

BLANCHE I'll see . . . If he's not too tired, I'll talk to him tonight.

KATE (Comes out of the kitchen) Jack's home. We'll eat in ten minutes. Nora, darling, go get Stanley . . . How's your mother, Laurie?

Laurie Much better. The whistling's stopped.

(KATE walks to the front door and goes out. JACk is sitting on the stoop, wiping his neck. NORA goes upstairs)

KATE What's wrong? Eugene said you were holding your chest.

JACK I wasn't holding my chest.
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

Kate You have to carry that box every day? Back and forth to the city. You don’t work hard enough, Jack?

Jack You want the box, it’s yours. Keep it. I don’t need it anymore.

Kate What do you mean?

Jack Del Mars Party Favors went out of business. They closed him out. The man is bankrupt.

Kate Oh, my God!

Jack He never even warned me it was coming.

Kate You told me he lived up on Riverside Drive. With a view of the river. A three-hundred-dollar-a-month apartment he had. A man like that.

Jack Who are the ones you think go bankrupt? You live in a cold-water flat on Delancey Street, bankruptcy is the one thing God spares you.

Kate All right . . . You can always find good in something. You don’t have to lug that box anymore. You don’t have to get up at five-thirty in the morning. We can all eat dinner at a decent hour. You still have your job with Jacobson, we won’t starve.

Jack I can’t make ends meet with what I make at Jacobson’s. Not with seven people to feed.

Kate (Looks back toward the house) They’ll hear you. We’ll talk later.

Jack I can’t get by without that extra twenty-five dollars a week. I can’t pay rent and insurance and food and clothing for seven people. Christmas and New Year’s alone I made a hundred and fifty dollars.

KATE (Nervous about someone hearing) Stop it, Jack. You’ll only get yourself sick.

JACK He didn’t even pay me for the week, the bastard. Five salesmen are laid off and he’s going to a Broadway show tonight. I stuffed every hat and noisemaker I could carry in that box and walked out of there. At his funeral I’ll put on a pointy hat and blow a horn, the bastard!

KATE Don’t talk like that. Something’ll come up. You’ll go to temple this weekend. You’ll pray all day Saturday.

JACK (Smiles ironically) There’s men in that temple who’ve been praying for forty years. You know how many prayers have to get answered before my turn comes up?

KATE (Rubs his back where it pains him) Your turn’ll come up. God has time for everybody.

(EUGENE has come out of the kitchen with two glasses of water. He walks over to BLANCHE)

EUGENE Here’s your water, Aunt Blanche.

BLANCHE Thank you, darling.

EUGENE Where’s Nora?

LAURIE She went up to call Stanley for dinner.

EUGENE Hey, Laurie—you want to take a walk on the beach tonight?
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

LAURIE I have homework. What do you want to walk with me for?

EUGENE You, me and Nora. I just felt like taking a walk.

LAURIE I think Nora has a date with Larry Clurman.

EUGENE Larry Clurman?? She likes Larry Clurman?

LAURIE I don’t know. Ask her yourself.

EUGENE Larry Clurman is my father’s age.

LAURIE He’s twenty.

EUGENE Same thing . . . You think he’s good-looking?

LAURIE I don’t think anybody’s good-looking.

EUGENE Larry Clurman? He doesn’t even have a chin. His tie comes all the way up to his teeth.

KATE (Calls out) Eugene! Where’s your father’s water?

EUGENE I’m coming! I’m coming. (As he walks through the front door, he turns to the audience) Now I’ve got Larry Clurman to contend with. (He comes out) Here’s your water, Pop. I put ice in it.

(He hands a glass of water to his father, who drinks it all)

KATE Don’t drink so fast.

EUGENE Do you have time to look at my sneakers, Pop?

KATE What does he want to look at your sneakers for?
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

JACK  She was married once, wasn't she? Those are the type that get married.

KATE  Dave was different. She's not interested in other men.

JACK  What about that Murphy fellow across the street? He's plenty interested, believe me.

KATE  That drunk! The man can't find his way into the house at night. He slept in the doorway once. In the rain. He was there when I went out to get the milk.

JACK  He's got a good-paying job, lives alone with his mother. So he takes a drink on a Saturday night. Maybe what he needs is a good woman.

KATE  Not my sister. Let him meet someone lying in the next doorway. I don't want to discuss this anymore. (She goes inside and into the kitchen. JACK sighs, gets up slowly and follows her in. Our attention goes to STANLEY on his bed still reading the letter from Rosalyn Weiner. He suddenly sits up. NORA knocks on the door)

STANLEY  Come in.

NORA (Entering)  Are you busy? I wanted to talk to you.

STANLEY  That's funny, because I wanted to talk to you.

NORA  About what?

STANLEY  I need a favor. Real bad. You're the only one who can help me.

NORA  What is it?

38
ACT ONE

EUGENE They have no soles. They’re hanging on by a tiny piece of rubber. I have to clench my toes when I run out for a fly ball.

JACK I bought you new sneakers last month.

EUGENE Last year, Pa. Not last month. I can only wear them two hours a day because my toes can’t grow in them.

KATE This is no time to talk to your father about sneakers. He’s got enough on his mind. Turn the light down on the liver. (EUGENE goes inside and into the kitchen. To JACK) We’ll talk about this tonight. You’ll eat a nice dinner, relax, and when everybody’s asleep, we’ll figure things out calmly. I don’t like it when you get upset.

BLANCHE I’m feeling better. Come, dear, help me with dinner.

JACK (Looks at the house) You think she’ll ever get married?

KATE Blanche?

JACK She’s not unattractive. I see men look at her on the beach. What does she want to waste her life in this house for?

KATE She’s raising two children.

JACK Why doesn’t she ever go out? If she wants to meet people, I know plenty of single men.

KATE Blanche isn’t the type to get married.
ACT ONE

STANLEY Well, when Pop comes home tired, he doesn’t usually pay too much attention to me and Eugene. He’s different with you. He’s always interested in what you have to say.

NORA Really? I hope so.

STANLEY Oh, sure. You never noticed that?

NORA Not really. What’s the favor?

STANLEY This may sound dumb, but at dinner, do you think you could steer the conversation in a certain direction?

NORA What direction?

STANLEY Well, something like how much you “admire people who stand up for their principles.”

NORA What people?

STANLEY Any people. “Principles” is the important word. If you could work it in three or four times, I’d be very grateful.

NORA Three or four times??

STANLEY It’ll be easy. I’ll mention someone like Abraham Lincoln and you look up and say, “Now there’s a man who really stood up for his principles.”

NORA I have my own things to bring up at dinner. I don’t want to get into a discussion about Abraham Lincoln.

STANLEY Not his whole life. Just his principles.
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

NORA Why would I do such a stupid thing?

STANLEY Because as of tomorrow I'm unemployed ... unless someone besides me mentions "sticking up for your principles."

NORA What happened? Did you get fired?

STANLEY I will be unless I write Kaiser Wilhelm a letter of apology. It's really up to my old man. I've decided to do whatever he tells me ...

NORA When are you going to ask him?

STANLEY Tonight. Right after dinner.

NORA Tonight? Does it have to be tonight?

STANLEY That's the deadline. I have to give my answer to Mr. Stroheim in the morning. Why?

NORA Couldn't you ask your father in the morning?

STANLEY He gets up at five-thirty. My mother has to line up his shoes at night because he can't make decisions at five-thirty. (She is about to break into tears) What's wrong, Nora?

NORA (Angrily) I don't know what you have to complain about. At least your father is alive and around the house to make decisions. You don't know when you're well off, Stanley. Sometimes you make me sick!

(She runs out of the room, slamming the door behind her. STANLEY sits there looking bewildered.

EUGENE walks into the dining room facing the audience. He looks at them and speaks)
ACT ONE

EUGENE Chapter Seven—“The Infamous Dinner”! (The others drift into the dining room, taking their seats. Blanche and Kate bring most of the dishes, passing them around. They are all seated as he continues his narrative) It started out like a murder mystery in Blenheim Castle. No one said a word but everyone looked suspicious . . . It was so quiet, you could hear Laurie’s soup going down her esophagus. (They sit silent, eating) Everyone had one eye on their plate and the other eye on Pop. Except me. I sat opposite Nora. (He sits opposite Nora) I kept dropping my napkin a lot so I could bend down to get a good look at those virginal creamy-white legs. She was really deep in thought because she left herself unguarded a few times and I got to see halfway up her thighs that led to the Golden Palace of the Himalayas.

KATE Eugene! Keep your napkin on your lap and stop daydreaming.

EUGENE (To the audience) Stanley knew what I was doing because he’s the one who taught it to me. But he was busy with his own problems, like everyone else. You could hear the clock ticking in the kitchen. The tension in the air was so thick, you could cut it with a knife. Which is more than I could say for the liver.

(He tries to cut his liver)

JACK Ketchup . . . mustard . . . pickles . . .

EUGENE I’m through. I’ll help with the dessert.

KATE Finish your liver.

EUGENE I finished. Do you see liver on my plate?

KATE You buried it under the mashed potatoes. I know your tricks. Look how Laurie ate hers.

EUGENE (To the audience) I had a major problem. One more bite and I would have thrown up on the table. That’s a sight Nora would have remembered forever. A diversion was my only escape from humiliation. (To stanley) So how’s things down at Stroheim’s, Stanley? (stanley, who is drinking water, slams down the glass, splashing it. He glares at eugene, who continues to address the audience) I felt bad about that, but for the moment, attention had shifted away from my liver.

JACK (To stanley) How long have you been working there now?

STANLEY Where?

JACK At Stroheim’s.

STANLEY At Stroheim’s? Let me see . . . part-time a year and a half before I graduated high school. And a year since then.

JACK So what’s that?

STANLEY Two and a half years, counting part-time.

JACK And he likes you?

STANLEY Who?

JACK (Impatiently) Mr. Stroheim.

STANLEY Yeah. Usually he likes me. Sometimes I’m not sure.
ACT ONE

JACK   You come in on time?

STANLEY  Yeah.

JACK   You do your work?

STANLEY  Yeah.

JACK   You get along with the other people?

STANLEY  Yeah.

JACK   So why shouldn't he like you? How much are you making now?

STANLEY  Seventeen dollars a week.

JACK   It's time you moved up. Tomorrow you go in and ask him for a raise.

STANLEY  A RAISE???

JACK   If you don't speak up, people take advantage of you. Tomorrow morning you go into his office, you're polite, you're respectful, but you're firm. You tell him you think you're worth another five dollars a week.

STANLEY  FIVE DOLLARS???

JACK   He'll offer you a dollar and a quarter, you settle for two-fifty. I know how these things work. You're a high school graduate, he's lucky he's got you.

STANLEY  I don't think this is the time to ask him for a raise, Pop. I think his wife is very sick.

JACK   You're afraid to ask him? You want me to take you by the hand and walk into his office and say, "My little boy wants a raise"?
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

STANLEY  I'm not afraid.

KATE    Your father wouldn't ask you if he didn't think it was the right thing. Believe me, Stanley, now is the time to ask for it.

EUGENE (Choking)  Ma, I think I have a bone in my throat.

KATE   There are no bones in liver.
   (He runs into the kitchen)

LAURIE  So what's new at dancing school, Nora?

NORA (Glares at her)  Nothing is new. Mind your own business.

LAURIE  I'm just trying to introduce the subject.

NORA   I don't need your help. Will you tell her to be quiet, Mother.

BLANCHE  Laurie, you may be excused if you're finished.

JACK    What happened at dancing school?

BLANCHE  Nora received a very nice compliment from her teacher. She said Nora had professional potential.

LAURIE  He didn't say "potential." "Potential" is the future. Mr. Beckman is interested in Nora's "immediate present."

JACK (Still eating)  Isn't that something! Mr. Beckman is your teacher?

NORA    No. He's one of the most widely known and respected producers on Broadway.
ACT ONE

JACK  Broadway? Imagine that. That’s wonderful. And how are you doing in school otherwise?

NORA (Looks at her mother)  I’m doing fine.

BLANCHE  She’s doing very well.

LAURIE  I wish I was as smart as she is.

EUGENE  Isn’t that the same Mr. Beckman who’s producing the great Broadway extravaganza Abracadabra? I hear if a girl gets hired for the chorus of a show like that, not only is her career practically guaranteed, but the experience she gains is equal to a four-year college education.

KATE  Eugene, that’s enough.

JACK  Only a four-year college education is equal to a four-year college education.

STANLEY  I don’t think Abraham Lincoln went to college.

  (NORA goes into the kitchen)

JACK  What about you, Laurie? You’re feeling all right?

LAURIE  Yes, Uncle Jack.

JACK  You getting plenty of fresh air?

  (NORA returns)

LAURIE  As much as I can hold in my lungs. Nora, did you tell Uncle Jack about the big tank that’s filled with water?

BLANCHE  Girls, why don’t we just let Uncle Jack eat his dinner? If we have something to discuss, we can discuss it later.
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

JACK  Somebody has something to discuss? If there's a problem, this is the time to bring it up. This is the family hour.

EUGENE  What a great idea for a radio show. The Family Hour. Every Wednesday night you hear a different family eating dinner discussing their problems of the week. And you get to hear different recipes. (As announcer) "WEAF presents dinner at Brighton Beach starring the Jacob Jerome Family and featuring tonight's specialty, liver and cabbage, brought to you by Ex-Lax, the mild laxative."

KATE  The whole country's going to hear about a fifteen-year-old boy gagging on liver?

JACK  Nothing to discuss? Nobody has any problems? Otherwise I want to turn on the news.

STANLEY  Well, as a matter of fact . . .

JACK  What?

STANLEY  Nothing.

EUGENE  I'll help with the dishes.

KATE  You sit there and finish your liver.

EUGENE  I can't swallow it. It won't go down. Remember the lima-bean catastrophe last month? Does anybody want to see a repeat of that disgusting episode?

JACK  Why does he always talk like it's a Sherlock Holmes story?

STANLEY  He thinks he's a writer.

46
ACT ONE

EUGENE  And what do you think you are?
KATE    Eat half of it.
EUGENE  Which half? They’re both terrible.
KATE    A quarter of it. Two bites.
EUGENE  One bite.
KATE    Two bites.
EUGENE  I know you. If I eat one bite, you’ll make me eat another bite . . . I’ll take it to my room. I’ll eat it tonight. I need time to chew it.
JACK    These are not times to waste food. If you didn’t want it, Eugene, you shouldn’t have taken it.
EUGENE  I didn’t take it. They gave it to me. It comes attached to the plate.
NORA    If it’s so important to everybody, I’ll eat your liver, Eugene.
        (They all look at her)
EUGENE  You will?
NORA    It seems to be the only thing this family is worried about. (She takes his plate) Give me your liver so we can get on with more important things in our lives.
JACK    Nora’s right. Take the liver away. If nobody likes it, why do you make it?
KATE (Angrily)  Because we can’t afford a roast beef for seven people.
    (She heads for the kitchen)
EUGENE (To the audience) I suddenly felt vulgar and cheap.

JACK Stanley, turn on the news.

BLANCHE Laurie, get off your feet. You look tired to me.

STANLEY Can I talk to you a minute, Pop? It's something really important.

JACK More important than what's going on in Europe? (He turns on the radio)

STANLEY It's not more important. It's just coming up sooner.

JACK (Fiddles with the dial) Hitler's already moved into Austria. In a couple of months the whole world will be in it . . . What's the matter with this radio? (It is barely audible)

KATE (Comes out of the kitchen) Someone's been fooling around with it. Haven't they, Eugene?

EUGENE Why "Eugene"? Pop had the news on last night.

KATE You weren't listening to the ball game this afternoon?

JACK He's talking about Poland . . . Dammit! I don't want anyone touching this radio anymore, you understand?

EUGENE (To the audience) Guess who's gonna get blamed for the war in Europe?
ACT ONE

KATE  Eugene! Bring in the knives and forks.
      (He does. JACK turns off the radio)

STANLEY  You really think there’ll be war, Pop? I mean, America too?

JACK  We’re already in it. Not us maybe. But friends, relatives. If you’re Jewish, you’ve got a cousin suffering somewhere in the world.

KATE (Wiping the table)  Ida Kazinsky’s family got out of Poland last month. The stories she tells about what’s going on there, you don’t even want to hear.

STANLEY  How many relatives do we have in Europe?

KATE  Enough. Uncles, cousins. I have a great-aunt. Your father has nephews.

JACK  I have a cousin, Sholem, in Poland. His whole family.

BLANCHE  Dave had relatives in Warsaw. That’s where his mother was born.

STANLEY  What if they got to America? Where would they live?

JACK  Who?

STANLEY  Your nephews. Mom’s cousins and uncles. Would we take them in?

JACK (Looks at KATE)  What God gives us to deal with, we deal with.
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

STANLEY Where would we put them?

KATE What are you worrying about things like that now for? Go upstairs and work on your speech.

STANLEY What speech?

KATE How you’re going to ask Mr. Stroheim for a raise tomorrow.

STANLEY (Looks apprehensively at Eugene) Can I talk to you later, Pop? After you’ve rested and read your paper?

EUGENE (Has taken part of his father’s paper, opens it) Lou Gehrig got two hits today. Larrupin Lou is hitting three-oh-two!

KATE (Grabs the paper away) Is that your paper? How many times have I told you you don’t read it until your father is finished?

EUGENE I didn’t break it. The print doesn’t come off if I take a quick look at it.

JACK Don’t be fresh to your mother. Upstairs.

STANLEY Pop?

JACK Everybody.

STANLEY I’ll come down later, okay, Pop?

EUGENE C’mon, Stan. I have to talk to you anyway. (They start toward the stairs)

STANLEY (To Eugene) You’re a pest! Did anyone ever tell you you’re a pest?

50
ACT ONE

EUGENE Yeah. I have a list upstairs. You wanna add your name to it?

(He taps STANLEY on the forehead with his forefinger. It is annoying and STAN chases him up the stairs)

KATE (To JACK) Maybe you should lie down. There's nothing in that paper that's going to cheer you up.

JACK (Thoughtfully) What would we do, Kate? Where would we put them if they got off the boat and knocked on our door? How would we feed them?

KATE The boat didn't get here yet. I can't deal with boats that haven't landed yet.

(NORA bursts out of the kitchen, apparently having just argued with her mother. She is followed by BLANCHE and LAURIE)

NORA (Determined) Uncle Jack! I know you're tired and you have a lot of things on your mind, but the rest of my life may depend on your decision and I have to know tonight because I have to call Mr. Beckman and let him know if I can go or not.

JACK Who's Mr. Beckman?

NORA The Broadway producer we talked about at dinner.

LAURIE Ab 'acadabra'? Remember?

(We see STANLEY walk to the bathroom—EUGENE walks into the bedroom)

BLANCHE Laurie! Upstairs! This minute . . . Nora, not now. This isn't the time.

NORA (Angrily) It's never the time. You won't make a decision and I don't have anyone else I can talk to.
Well, I’ll make my own decision if no one else is interested. I’m sixteen and a half years old and I’ll do what I want to do.

(The tears begin to flow as she runs out the front door to the yard)

JACK What is this all about?

KATE Go on out, Jack. Talk to her.

BLANCHE I’ll take care of it. Nora’s right. It’s my decision.

KATE What are you going to tell her? That she can leave school? That she can throw her future away? Is that what you want to do?

BLANCHE What if I’m wrong? What if she’s got talent? What is it I’m supposed to say?

JACK She can’t talk to me? It’s all the same family, isn’t it? I’m her uncle, for God’s sake.

KATE She doesn’t need an uncle tonight. She needs a father . . . Go on. She’ll tell you.

(Jack looks at them both, then walks out to the front yard. Nora is sitting on the bench, tearfully)

BLANCHE I never learned . . .

JACK (To Nora) You mind if I sit with you?

BLANCHE I wrapped my life up in Dave so much, I never learned to be their mother.

JACK If you want to talk, we’ll talk; if not, not.
ACT ONE

KATE We have enough mothers here. This is a family. The world doesn’t survive without families . . . Laurie, do your homework. Blanche, make me some tea. You’re the only one here who makes decent tea.

(LAURIE goes up to her room. BLANCHE and KATE have gone into the kitchen)

JACK Listen . . . I know what it’s like, Nora. Not to be heard.

NORA You do?

JACK I grew up in a family of four children. My father, before he died, never could remember our names. My oldest brother was “the big one,” I was “the little one.” My brother Sol was “the rotten one,” Eddie was “the skinny one.”

NORA Who am I?

JACK The pretty one . . . What’s the problem?

(STANLEY walks from the bathroom, into the bedroom)

NORA I don’t know. It doesn’t seem very important now.

JACK I’ve never seen you cry over something that wasn’t important. I know I’m not your father. It’s not my place to make decisions for you. But I can offer advice. Advice is free. If it doesn’t fit, you can always return it.

NORA Can we walk down the block?
JACK  Sure. We'll take a look at the ocean. My father always used to say, "Throw your problems out to sea and the answers will wash back up on the shore."

NORA  Did they?

JACK  Not in Brighton Beach. Orange peels and watermelon pits washed up. That's why it's good to take someone who knows how to give advice.

(She gets up and they walk off toward the beach.

STANLEY  is lying on his bed, hands under his head, deep in thought. EUGENE sits on his bed, hanging a baseball into his glove)

STANLEY  Will you stop that? I'm trying to think.

EUGENE  I'm glad I don't have your problems.

STANLEY  How'd you like an official American League baseball in your mouth?

EUGENE  I've got to talk to you, Stanley. I mean a really serious, important talk.

STANLEY  Everybody in this house has to have a talk with somebody. Take a number off the wall and wait your turn.

EUGENE  I had a dream last night. It was about this girl. I can't tell you her name but she's gorgeous. We were really kissing hard and rubbing up against each other and I felt this tremendous build-up coming like at the end of The Thirty-nine Steps. And suddenly there was an explosion. Like a dam broke and everything rushed and flowed out to sea. It was the greatest feeling I ever had in my life . . . and when I woke up, I was—I was—
ACT ONE

STANLEY All wet.

EUGENE (Surprised) Yeah! How’d you know?

STANLEY (Unimpressed) It was a wet dream. You had a wet dream. I have them all the time.

EUGENE You do? You mean there’s nothing wrong with you if it happens?

STANLEY You never had one before?

EUGENE Yeah, but I slept through it.

STANLEY Didn’t you ever try to do it by yourself?

EUGENE What do you mean?

STANLEY Didn’t you ever diddle with yourself?

EUGENE No. Never.

STANLEY Baloney. I’ve heard you. You diddle three, four times a week.

EUGENE You’re crazy! What do you mean, diddle?

STANLEY Whack off. Masturbate.

EUGENE Will you be quiet! Laurie might hear you.

STANLEY There’s nothing wrong with it. Everybody does it. Especially at our age. It’s natural.

EUGENE What do you mean, everybody? You know guys who do it?
Every guy I know does it. Except Haskell Fleischmann, the fat kid. He does it to the other guys.

I can’t believe I’m having this conversation.

You can’t grow up without doing it. Your voice won’t change.

Where do you get this stuff from? Is it in a medical book or something?

It’s puberty.

It’s what?

Puberty. You never heard that word before? You don’t read books?

Even Pop did it.

Hey! Don’t you use that language. Who do you think you are? You’re just a kid. Never let me hear you say that word again.

I don’t get you. You mean it’s okay for you to say “puberty” but I can’t say “shit”?

“Puberty” is a scientific word. “Shit” is for those guys who hang around the beach.

What do you expect me to say when you tell me that Pop whacks off?
ACT ONE

STANLEY  I don’t mean he still does it, because he’s married now. But when he was a kid. Fourteen or fifteen. The whole world whacks off.

EUGENE  President Roosevelt too?

STANLEY  Rich kids are the worst. They whack off from morning till night. In college, they sit around in their dorms drinking beer and whacking off.

EUGENE  Stanley, this is the most useful information you ever taught me . . . What about girls?

STANLEY  Five times as much as boys.

EUGENE  Five times as much? Is that an actual figure? Where do you know all this from?

STANLEY  You pick it up. You learn it. It’s handed down from generation to generation. That’s how our culture spreads.

EUGENE  Five times as much as boys? Some of them don’t even say hello to you and they’re home all night whacking off.

STANLEY  They’re human just like we are. They have the same needs and desires.

EUGENE  Then why is it so hard to touch their boobs?

STANLEY  If you were a girl, would you like some guy jumping at you and grabbing your boobs?

EUGENE  If I had boobs, I would love to touch them, wouldn’t you?

STANLEY  I’ve got my own problems to think about.
EUGENE  How do girls do it?

STANLEY  I can’t explain it.

EUGENE  Please, Stanley. I’ll be your slave for a month.
Tell me how they do it.

STANLEY  I need a pencil and paper. I’ll do it later.

EUGENE  (Quickly hands him his notebook and a pencil)  Do you want crayons? Maybe you should do it in color?

STANLEY  Hey, Eugene. I have a major problem in my life. I haven’t got time to draw girls masturbating for you.

EUGENE  I’ll bet Nora doesn’t do it.

STANLEY  Boy, could I win money from you. You think she’s in the bathroom seven times a day just taking showers?

EUGENE  She does it in the bathroom?

STANLEY  I knew two girls who used to do it in English class. I saw a girl do it during a final exam and she got a ninety-eight on her paper . . . Is she the one you were thinking about last night?

EUGENE  No. It was somebody else. One of the beach girls.

STANLEY  It was Nora. I see what’s going on. I knew why you dropped your napkin twelve times at dinner tonight.

EUGENE  She drives me crazy. I think I’m in love with her.
ACT ONE

STANLEY Yeah? Well, forget it. She’s your cousin.

EUGENE What’s wrong with being in love with your cousin?

STANLEY Because it’s against the laws of nature. If she was your stepsister, it would be dirty, but it would be okay. But you can’t love your own cousin. Let me give you a piece of advice: When you’re going through puberty, don’t start with anyone in your own house.

EUGENE Who made up those rules? Franklin Roosevelt married his cousin.

STANLEY Maybe she was his second or third cousin. But you can’t marry your first cousin. You get babies with nine heads... I wish Pop would get back. I got to talk to him tonight.

EUGENE I still would love to see her naked. Just once. There’s nothing wrong with that, is there?

STANLEY No. I do it all the time.

EUGENE You’ve seen Nora naked?

STANLEY Lots of times. I fixed the lock on the bathroom door, then opened it pretending I didn’t know anyone was in there.

EUGENE I can’t believe it. What a pig!... What did she look like?

STANLEY All I can tell you is I was pretty miserable she was my first cousin.

(He lies back on his bed. EUGENE turns and looks out at the audience)
EUGENE That was the night I discovered lust and guilt were very closely related. (To STANLEY) I have to wash up.

STANLEY (Teasingly) Have a good time.

EUGENE I don’t do that.

(BLANCHE and KATE come out of the kitchen. They each have a cup of tea. They sit at the dining table)

KATE I’m sorry. I forgot it was this Tuesday. I’ll change my doctor appointment.

BLANCHE You don’t have to change anything. The girls will be with me.

KATE Have I ever missed a year going to the grave? Dave was my favorite in the whole family, you know that.

BLANCHE You realize it’ll be six years? Sometimes I forget his birthday, but the day he died I never forget.

KATE There wasn’t another one like him.

BLANCHE Laurie asks me questions about him all the time. Was he funny? What was the funniest thing he ever said, she asked me. I couldn’t remember. Isn’t that awful, Kate?

KATE Sometimes you talk like your life is over. You’re still a young woman. You’re still beautiful, if you’d ever stop squinting so much.

BLANCHE I went with him for two years before we were married. What was I waiting for? That’s two married years I didn’t have with him.

ACT ONE

KATE Listen. Jack's company is having their annual affair in New York next Wednesday. At the Commo- dore Hotel. You should see how some of those women get dressed up. Jack wants you to come with us. He told me to ask you.

BLANCHE Me? Who do I know in Jack's company?

KATE You'll be with us. You'll meet people. Max Green'll be at our table. He's the one whose wife died last year from (He whispers)—tuberculosis . . . He's their number one salesman. He lives in a hotel on the Grand Concourse. He's a riot. You'll like him. Maybe you'll dance with him. What else are you going to do here every night?

BLANCHE I don't have a dress to wear for a thing like that.

KATE You'll make something. Jack'll get you some material. He knows everybody in the garment district.

BLANCHE Thank you, Kate. I appreciate it. I can't go. Maybe next year.

KATE Next year you won't have any eyes altogether. What are you afraid of, Blanche? Dave is dead. You're not. If God wanted the both of you, you'd be laying in the grave next to him.

BLANCHE I've made plans for next Wednesday night.

KATE More important than this? They have this affair once a year.
BLANCHE  I'm having dinner with someone.

KATE  You're having dinner? With a man? That's wonderful. Why didn't you tell me?

BLANCHE  With Mr. Murphy.
(This stops KATE right in her tracks)

KATE  Who's Mr. Murphy? . . . Oh, my God! I don't understand you. You're going to dinner with that man? Do you know where he'll take you? To a saloon. To a Bar and Grill, that's where he'll take you.

BLANCHE  We're going to Chardov's, the Hungarian restaurant. You never even met the man, why do you dislike him so much?

KATE  I don't have to meet that kind. I just have to smell his breath when he opens the window. What do you think a man like that is looking for? I grew up with that kind on Avenue A. How many times have Stanley and Gene come home from school black and blue from the beatings they took from those Irish hooligans? What have you got to talk to with a man like that?

BLANCHE  Is that why you don't like him? Because he's Irish? When have the Jews and the Irish ever fought a war? You know who George Bernard Shaw is?

KATE  I don't care who he is.

BLANCHE  One of the greatest Irish writers in the world? What would you say if he took me to Chardov's next Wednesday?
ACT ONE

KATE Is Mr. Murphy a writer? Tell him to bring me some of his books, I'll be glad to read them.

BLANCHE Kate, when are you going to give up being an older sister?

KATE I've heard stories about him. With women. They like their women, you know. Well, if that's what you want, it's your business.

EUGENE (To the audience) I decided to go downstairs and quiet my passion with oatmeal cookies.

BLANCHE We took a walk along the beach last Thursday. He hardly said a word. He's very shy. Very quiet. He told me where his parents came from in Ireland. Their life wasn't any easier than Momma and Poppa's in Russia.

KATE Nobody had it like they had it in Russia.

BLANCHE He holds down a decent job in a printers' office and he didn't smell of liquor and he behaved like a perfect gentleman.

(EUGENE comes down the stairs. He had been listening)

KATE (Without turning) No cookies for you. Not until you eat that liver.

EUGENE You're still saving it? You mean it's going to be in the icebox until I grow up?

KATE No cookies, you hear me?

EUGENE I just want a glass of water.
KATE You have water in your bathroom.

EUGENE There's toothpaste in the glass. It makes me nauseous.

(He goes into the kitchen)

KATE (To BLANCHE) Listen, there's no point discussing this. I'm going to bed. Do what you want.

BLANCHE Kate! . . . I don't want to do anything that's going to make you unhappy. Or Jack. I owe too much to you. I can't live off you the rest of my life. Every decent job I've tried to get, they turn me down because of my eyes. The thought of marrying Frank Murphy hasn't even occurred to me. Maybe not even to him. But I don't think one dinner at Chardov's is the end of the world.

KATE I just don't want to see you get hurt. I never mean you harm. I can take anything except when someone in the family is mad at me.

BLANCHE (Embraces her) I could never be mad at you, Kate. That I promise you to my dying day.

KATE Go on. Have dinner with Frank Murphy. If Poppa ever heard me say those words, he'd get up from the cemetery and stand in front of our house with a big stick.

(Blanche kisses her again)

BLANCHE I told him to pick me up here. Is that all right?

KATE Here? In my house?

BLANCHE For two minutes. I wanted you to meet him. At least see what he's like.
ACT ONE

KATE Tell his mother to wash her windows, maybe I'd know what he's like.

(We see NORA hurriedly cross the front yard and open the front door. She looks upset. NORA walks over to her mother, determined)

NORA Can I see Mr. Beckman tomorrow? Yes or no?

(JACK crosses the front yard)

BLANCHE Did you talk to Uncle Jack?

NORA I talked to Uncle Jack. I want an answer from you, Mother. Yes or no?

(JACK enters the house)

BLANCHE What did he say?

NORA It doesn't matter what he said. It's your decision or mine. Who's going to make it, Mother?

JACK I said if I were her father, I'd tell her to finish high school. If she's got talent, there'll be plenty of other shows. I never got past the eighth grade and that's why I spend half my life on the subway and the other half trying to make a few extra dollars to keep this family from being out on the street.

NORA (To BLANCHE) I don't want this just for myself, Momma, but for you and for Laurie. In a few years we could have a house of our own, instead of all being cooped up here like animals. We could pay Uncle Jack for what he's given us all these years. I'm asking for a way out, Momma. Don't shut me in. Don't shut me in for the rest of my life.

(They all turn and look at BLANCHE)
BLANCHE  You promised you’d do what Uncle Jack said.

NORA   He doesn’t make decisions—he offers advice. I want a decision, Momma. From you . . . Please!

BLANCHE You finish high school. You tell Mr. Beckman you’re too young. You tell him your mother said “No” . . . That’s my decision.

NORA (Looks at her, frustrated) I see. (To JACK) Thank you very much, Uncle Jack, for your advice. (To BLANCHE) I’ll let you know in the morning what my decision is.

(She rushes upstairs to her room. BLANCHE starts to go after her)

KATE   Let her go, Blanche. Let her sleep on it. You’ll only make it worse.

BLANCHE It seems no matter what I do, I only make it worse.

(She turns, starts up the stairs.
NORA has slammed the door of her room. STANLEY bears it and opens his door and starts down)

JACK (To KATE) What could I tell her? What could I say?

KATE (Sbrugs) You inherit a family, you inherit their problems.

EUGENE (Comes out of the kitchen) Well, good night.

KATE   Put the cookie on the table.

EUGENE   What cookie?

KATE   The oatmeal cookie in your pocket. Put it on the table.
ACT ONE

EUGENE  You can smell an oatmeal cookie from ten feet away?

KATE  I heard the jar moving in the kitchen. Suddenly everybody’s doing what they want in this house. Your father’s upset, Aunt Blanche is upset, put the cookie on that table!

(EUGENE puts the cookie on the table and starts up the stairs to his room. He passes STANLEY)

STANLEY (To EUGENE)  I heard a lot of yelling. What happened?

EUGENE  I don’t know, but it’s my fault.

(He goes on up and into the bath room.
NORA is on her bed, crying. LAURIE sits on her bed and watches her)

LAURIE  What are you going to do?  (NORA shakes her head, indicating she doesn’t know)  Do you want me to speak to Mom? I could tell her I was getting flutters in my heart again.

NORA (Turns, angrily)  Don’t you ever say that! Don’t you pretend to be sick to get favors from anyone.

LAURIE  I’m not pretending. They’re just not big flutters.

(STANLEY has been sitting at the top of the stairs trying to work up courage to talk to his father.

JACK is sitting in the living room, disconsolate. KATE is puffing up pillows)

JACK  Stop puffing up pillows. The house could be burning down and you’d run back in to puff up the pillows.

KATE  Let’s go to bed. You’re tired.
JACK  When does it get easier, Kate? When does our life get easier?

KATE  At night. When you get seven good hours of sleep. That’s the easiest it ever gets.

      (NORA has put on her robe, left her room and opens the bathroom door. We hear a scream from EUGENE)

EUGENE  CLOSE THE DOOR!!!

NORA  Oh. I’m sorry. I didn’t know anyone was in there.

      (She rushes out, back to her room.
      STANLEY moves into the living room)

STANLEY  Dad? Do you think I could talk to you now?
          It’ll just take five minutes.

KATE  He’s tired, Stanley. He’s practically asleep.

STANLEY  Two minutes. I’ll tell it as fast as I can.

JACK  Go on, Kate. Go to bed. The boy wants to tell me something.

KATE  Turn out the lights when you’re through. (She kisses JACK’s head) Don’t worry about things. We’ve always made them work out.

      (She leaves the room just as EUGENE darts out of the bathroom, rushes into his own room and slams the door)

EUGENE  She saw me on the crapper! Nora saw me on the crapper! (He falls on his bed) I might as well be dead.

STANLEY  I have a problem, Pop.

JACK  If you didn’t, you wouldn’t live in this house.
ACT ONE

STANLEY It must be tough being a father. Everybody comes to you with their problems. You have to have all the answers. I don’t know if I could handle it.

JACK Stop trying to win me over. Just tell me the problem.

STANLEY I got fired today!

JACK What???

STANLEY Don’t get excited! Don’t get crazy! Let me explain what happened.

JACK What did you do? You came in late? You were fresh to somebody? Were you fresh to somebody?

STANLEY I’m not fired yet. I can still get my job back. I just need you to help me make a decision.

JACK Take the job back. I don’t care what it is. This is not the time for anybody to be out of work in this family.

STANLEY When I was twelve years old you gave me a talk about principles. Remember?

JACK All night you waited to tell me this news?

STANLEY This is about principles, Pop.

JACK How long were you going to go without telling me?

STANLEY Will you at least hear my principles?

JACK All right, I’ll hear your principles. Then you’ll hear mine.

69
STANLEY  Just sit back and let me tell you what happened. Okay? Well, it was on account of Andrew, the colored guy who sweeps up.

(JACK sits back and listens. STANLEY sits with his back to the audience, talking, but we can't hear him.
Our attention is drawn to EUGENE up in his room)

EUGENE (To the audience)  . . . So Stanley began his sad story. Pop never said a word. He just sat there and listened. Stanley was terrific. It was like that movie, Abe Lincoln in Illinois. Stanley was not only defending his principles, he was defending democracy and the United States of America. Pop must have been bleary-eyed because not only did he have to deal with Stanley’s principles, Nora’s career, the loss of his noisemaker business, how to get Aunt Blanche married off and Laurie’s fluttering heart, but at any minute there could be a knock on the door with thirty-seven relatives from Poland showing up looking for a place to live . . . Finally, Stanley finished his story.

STANLEY  So—either I bring in a letter of apology in the morning or I don’t bother coming in . . . I know it’s late. I know you’re tired. But I didn’t want to do anything without asking you first.

JACK (After a few moments of silence)  Ohh, Stanley, Stanley, Stanley!

STANLEY  I’m sorry, Pop.

JACK  You shouldn’t have swept the dirt on his shoes.

STANLEY  I know.
ACT ONE

JACK Especially in front of other people.

STANLEY I know.

JACK He’s your boss. He pays your salary. His money helps put food on our dining table.

STANLEY I know, Pop.

JACK And we don’t have money to waste. Believe me when I tell you that.

STANLEY I believe you, Pop.

JACK You were sick three days last year and he only docked you a day and a half’s pay, remember that?

STANLEY I know. I can see what you’re getting at. I’ll write the letter. I’ll do it tonight.

JACK On the other hand, you did a courageous thing. You defended a fellow worker. Nobody else stood up for him, did they?

STANLEY I was the only one.

JACK That’s something to be proud of. It was what you believed in. That’s standing up for your principles.

STANLEY That’s why I didn’t want to write the letter. I knew you’d understand.

JACK The question is, Can this family afford principles right now?
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

STANLEY  It would make it hard, I know.

JACK  Not just on you and me. But on your mother. On Aunt Blanche, Nora, Laurie.

STANLEY  Eugene.

JACK  Eugene. Eugene would have to get a part-time job. Time he should be using studying books to get himself somewhere.

STANLEY  He wants to be a writer. He wants to go to college.

JACK  I wish I could have sent you. I've always been sick about that, Stanley.

STANLEY  I like working, Pop. I really do . . . Listen, I made up my mind. I'm going to write the letter.

JACK  I'm not saying you should . . .

STANLEY  I know. It's my decision. I really want to write the letter.

JACK  And how will your principles feel in the morning?

STANLEY  My principles feel better already. You told me you were proud of what I did. That's all I really cared about.

JACK  You know something, Stanley—I don't think there's much in college they could teach you that you don't already know.

STANLEY  Guess who I learned it from? . . . Thanks for talking to me, Pop. See you in the morning. You coming to bed?

72
ACT ONE

JACK I think I'll sit here for a while. It's the only time of day I have a few minutes to myself.
(Stanley nods, then bounds up the stairs to his room. Jack sits back in his chair and closes his eyes.

Stanley enters his room. Eugene is writing in his book of memoirs)

EUGENE How'd it go? Do you have to write the letter?

STANLEY Yeah.
(He gets out a pad and his fountain pen)

EUGENE I knew that's what he'd make you do.

STANLEY He didn't make me do it ... Be quiet, will ya! I have to concentrate.

EUGENE What are you going to say?

STANLEY I don't know ... You want to help me? You're good at those things.

EUGENE People used to get paid for that in the old days. Professional letter writers.

STANLEY (Indignant) I'm not going to pay you money.

EUGENE I don't want money.

STANLEY Then what do you want?

EUGENE Tell me what Nora looked like naked.

STANLEY How horny can you get?

EUGENE I don't know. What's the highest score?
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

STANLEY All right. When we finish the letter.

EUGENE I don't trust you. I want to get paid first.

STANLEY You know, you're a real shit!

EUGENE Don't talk like that in front of me, I'm just a kid.

STANLEY What do you want to know?

EUGENE Everything. From the time you opened the door.

STANLEY It happened so fast.

EUGENE That's okay. Tell it slow.

STANLEY Jesus! All right . . . I heard the shower running. I waited for it to stop. I gave a few seconds for the water to run off her body, then I knew she'd be stepping out of the shower. Suddenly I just opened the door. She was standing there on the bath mat, a towel on her head and nothing else in the whole wide world.

EUGENE Slower. Don't go so fast.

STANLEY Her breasts were gorgeous. Like two peaches hanging on the vine waiting to be plucked . . . Maybe nectarines. Like two nectarines, all soft and pink and shining in the morning sun . . .

ACT TWO
Wednesday, a week later. About six-thirty in the evening. Kate comes down the stairs carrying a tray of food. She looks a little haggard.

Laurie is lying on the sofa in the living room with a book. Eugene is in the backyard, sitting on the beach chair, writing in his book of memoirs.

Kate Laurie! You should see your mother. She looks gorgeous.

Laurie I'm waiting for her grand entrance . . . How's Uncle Jack?

Kate He's resting. He ate a nice dinner. You can go up and see him later. (She yells) Eugene! Your father's resting. I don't want to hear any ball playing against the wall.

Eugene I'm not playing. I'm writing.

Kate Well, do it quietly.

(She goes into the kitchen)

Eugene (To the audience) She wants me to write quietly. If that was the only sentence I published in my memoirs, it would be a best seller . . . Everybody's been in a rotten mood around here lately . . . Three days ago Pop had a (He whispers)—heart attack. It wasn't a major (He whispers)—heart attack. It was sort of a warning. He passed out in the subway and a policeman had to bring him home. He was trying to make extra money driving a cab at nights and he just plain wore out . . . The doctor says he has to stay home for two or three weeks, but Pop won't listen to him. Mr. Jacobson has a brother-in-law who needs a job. He's filling in for Pop temporarily, but Pop's afraid that three weeks in bed could turn into permanently.

(STANLEY appears, coming home from work. He looks distraught. He half whispers to EUGENE)

STANLEY I have to talk to you.

EUGENE What's up?

STANLEY Not here. In our room. Don't tell anybody.

EUGENE What's the big secret?

STANLEY Will you shut up! Wait'll I get upstairs, then follow me.

(He goes into the house)

EUGENE If it's about Nora, I'm not interested. (To the audience) I forgot to tell you, I hate my cousin Nora. She's been real snotty to everybody lately. She doesn't say hello in the morning and eats her dinner up in her room. And she's been seeing this guy Larry No Chin Clurman every night. And she's not as pretty as I thought she was . . .

KATE (Walking out of the kitchen) Eugene! Did you bring your father his paper?

EUGENE I'm coming. My knee hurts. I fell down the stairs at school.

KATE Well, bring it up. Your father's waiting for it.

(She goes back into the kitchen)

EUGENE (To the audience) If I told her I just lost both my hands in an accident she'd say, "Go upstairs and wash your face with your feet" . . . I guess she's sore because she and Pop can't go to the affair at the Commodore Hotel. They had Glen Gray and his orchestra... I feel sorry for her 'cause she doesn't get to go out much. (He gets up, starts toward the house) And she's nervous about Frank Murphy coming over to pick up Aunt Blanche. She's angry at the whole world. (He enters the house) That's why she's making lima beans for dinner.
ACT TWO

KATE (Walks into the living room with a dish of nuts) Would you like a cashew, Laurie?

LAURIE Oh, thanks. (She takes one) And a Brazil nut too? (She takes one) And one almond? (She takes one)

KATE You must be starved. We're having dinner late tonight. We'll wait till your mother goes out.

EUGENE (Limps into the living room) Can I have some nuts, Mom?

KATE Just one. It's for the company. (He takes one, starts upstairs) We're eating in the kitchen tonight. You and Stanley help with the dishes. (He goes upstairs)

KATE (To laurie) You look all flushed. You don't have a fever, do you? (She feels laurie's bead) Let me see your tongue. (Laurie shows her her tongue) It's all spotted.

LAURIE That's the cashew nut.

KATE Don't you get sick on me too. If you're tired, I want you in bed.

LAURIE I have a little stomach cramp. Maybe I'm getting my "ladies."
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

KATE Your what?

LAURIE My "ladies." That thing that Nora gets when she can't go in the water.

KATE I don't think so. Not at your age. But if your stomach hurts real bad, you come and tell me. I made a nice tuna fish salad tonight. Call me when your mother comes down.

(She starts toward the kitchen)

LAURIE Aunt Kate! . . . Does Momma like Mr. Murphy?

KATE I don't know, darling. I don't think she knows him very well yet.

LAURIE Do you like him?

KATE I never spoke to the man.

LAURIE You called him a Cossack. Are those the kind who don't like Jewish people?

KATE I'm sure Mr. Murphy likes your mother, otherwise he wouldn't be taking her out to dinner.

LAURIE If Mom married him, would we have to live in that dark house across the street? With that creepy woman in the window?

KATE We're not up to that yet. Let's just get through Chardov's Restaurant first.

(She goes into the kitchen.

EUGENE rushes into his room. STANLEY is lying on bis bed, hands under bis head, staring at the ceiling)

EUGENE Pop's feeling better. He threw the newspaper at me because I didn't bring him the evening edition.
ACT TWO

STANLEY (Sits up)  Lock the door.

EUGENE (Locking the door)  You look terrible. You were crying. Your eyes are all red.

STANLEY  I'm in trouble, Eug. I mean, real, real trouble.
(He takes a single cigarette out of his shirt pocket, puts it in his mouth and lights it with a match)

EUGENE  When did you take up smoking?

STANLEY  I smoke in the stockroom all the time. Don't let me see you do it. It's a bad habit.

EUGENE  So how come you do it?

STANLEY  I like it.

EUGENE  What brand do you smoke?

STANLEY  Lucky Strikes.

EUGENE  I knew you would. That's the best brand.

STANLEY  Swear to God, what I tell you, you'll never tell a living soul.

EUGENE (Raises his hand)  I take an oath on the life of the entire New York Yankees . . . What happened?

STANLEY (He paces before he can speak) . . . I lost my salary.

EUGENE  What?

STANLEY  The entire seventeen dollars. It's gone. I lost it.

EUGENE  Where? In the subway?
STANLEY  In a poker game. I lost it gambling.

EUGENE  IN A POKER GAME?

STANLEY  Will you shut up?? You want to kill Pop right in his bedroom?

EUGENE  You never told me you gambled.

STANLEY  We would just do it at lunch hour. For pennies. I always won. A dime. A quarter. It wasn't just luck. I was really good.

EUGENE  Seventeen dollars!!

STANLEY  When Pop got sick, I thought I could make some extra money. To help out. So I played in this game over in the stockroom at Florsheim Shoes . . . Boy, did I learn about poker. They cleaned me out in twenty minutes . . .

EUGENE  What are you going to tell them?

STANLEY  I don't know. If Pop wasn't sick, I would tell him the truth. Last week he tells me how proud he is of me. He's driving a cab at nights and I'm playing poker at Florsheim's.

(He puts his head down and starts to cry)

EUGENE  Yeah, but suppose you won? Suppose you won fifty dollars? You just had bad luck, that's all.

STANLEY  I had no chance against those guys. They were gamblers. They all wore black pointy shoes with clocks on their socks . . . If Pop dies, I'll hang myself, I swear.

EUGENE  Don't talk like that. Pop isn't going to die. He ate three lamb chops tonight . . . Why don't you just say you lost the money? You had a hole in your pocket. You can tear a hole in your pocket.
ACT TWO

STANLEY I already used that one.

EUGENE When?

STANLEY In November when I lost five dollars. He said to me, “From now on, check your pockets every morning.”

EUGENE What happened to the five dollars? Did you gamble that too?

STANLEY No. I gave it to a girl . . . You know. A pro.

EUGENE A pro what? . . . A PROSTITUTE???. You went to one of those places? Holy shit!

STANLEY I'm not going to warn you about that word again.

EUGENE Is that what it costs? Five dollars?

STANLEY Two-fifty. I went with this guy I know. He still owes me.

EUGENE And you never told me? What was she like? Was she pretty? How old was she?

STANLEY Don't start in with me, Eugene.

EUGENE Did she get completely naked or what?

STANLEY (Furious) Every time I get in trouble, I have to tell you what a naked girl looks like? . . . Do me a favor, Eugene. Go in the bathroom, whack off and grow up by yourself.
EUGENE  Don’t get sore. If you were me, you’d ask the same questions.

STANLEY  Well, I never had an older brother to teach me those things. I had to do it all on my own. You don’t know how lucky you are to be the younger one. You don’t have the responsibilities I do. You’re still in school looking up girls’ dresses on the staircase.

EUGENE  I work plenty hard in school.

STANLEY  Yeah? Well, let me see your report card. Today’s the first of the month, I know you got it. I want to see your report card.

EUGENE  I don’t have to show you my report card. You’re not my father.

STANLEY  Yes, I am. As long as Pop is sick, I am. I’m the only one in the family who’s working, ain’t I?

EUGENE  Really? Well, where’s your salary this week, Pop?

STANLEY (Grabs EUGENE in anger)  I hate you sometimes. You’re nothing but a lousy shit. I help you all the time and you never help me without wanting something for it. I hate your disgusting guts.

EUGENE (Screaming)  Not as much as I hate yours. You snore at night. You pick your toenails. You smell up the bathroom. When I go in there I have to puke.

STANLEY (Screaming back)  Give me your report card. Give it to me, goddammit, or I’ll beat your face in.
ACT TWO

EUGENE (Starts to cry) You want it? Here! (He grabs it out of a book) Here's my lousy report card . . . you fuck!!

(He falls on the bed crying, his face to the wall. STANLEY sits on his own bed and reads the report card. There is a long silence)

STANLEY (Softly) Four A's and a B . . . That's good. That's real good, Eugene . . . You're smart . . . I want you to go to college . . . I want you to be somebody important someday . . . Because I'm not . . . I'm no damn good. (He is crying) I'm sorry I said those things to you.

EUGENE (Still faces the wall. It's too hard to look at STAN) Me too . . . I'm sorry too.

(JACK appears at the top of the stairs. He is in his pajamas, robe and slippers. He seems very shaky. He holds on to the banister and slowly comes down the stairs.

He looks around, then sees LAURIE and walks into the living room. His breath does not come easy)

LAURIE (Sees him) Hi, Uncle Jack. Are you feeling better?

JACK A little, darling. Your mother's not down yet?

LAURIE No.

JACK I wanted to see her before she goes out.

(KATE comes out of the kitchen with a bowl of fruit. She sees JACK)

KATE Oh, my God! Are you crazy? Are you out of your mind? You're walking down the stairs?
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

JACK I'm all right. I was tired lying in that bed. I wanted to see Blanche.

(He sits down slowly)

KATE How are you going to get upstairs? You think I’m going to carry you? The doctor said you’re not even supposed to go to the bathroom, didn’t he?

JACK You trust doctors? My grandmother never saw one in her life, she lived to be eighty-seven.

KATE She didn’t have high blood pressure. She never fainted on the subway.

JACK She used to faint three, four times a week. It’s in our family. We’re fainters. Laurie, darling, go get your Uncle Jack a glass of ice water, please.

Laurie Now?

JACK Yes. Now, sweetheart. (Laurie gets up and goes into kitchen) That child is pampered too much. You should let her do more work around the house. You don’t get healthy lying on couches all day.

KATE No. You get healthy driving cabs at night after you work nine hours cutting raincoats. You want to kill yourself, Jack? You want to leave me to take care of this family alone? Is that what you want?

JACK You figure I’ll get better faster if you make me feel guilty? . . . I was born with enough guilt, Katey. If I need more, I’ll ask you.

KATE I’m sorry. You know me. I’m not happy unless I can worry. My family were worriers. Worriers generally marry fainters.

ACT TWO

JACK (Takes her band, holds it) I’m not going to leave you. I promise. If I didn’t leave you for another woman, I’m certainly not going to drop dead just to leave you.

KATE (Lets go of his band) What other woman? That bookkeeper, Helene?

JACK Again with Helene? You’re never going to forget that I danced with her two years in a row at the Commodore Hotel?

KATE Don’t tell me she isn’t attracted to you. I noticed that right off.

JACK What does a woman like that want with a cutter? She likes the men up front. The salesmen. She’s a widow. She’s looking to get married.

KATE You’re an attractive man, Jack. Women like you.

JACK Me? Attractive? You really must think I’m dying, don’t you?

KATE You don’t know women like I do. Just promise me one thing. If anything ever happened with you and that Helene, let me go to my grave without hearing it.

JACK I see. Now that you’re worried about Helene, you’ve decided you’re going to die first.

(LAURIE comes back in with a glass of ice water)

LAURIE I had to chop the ice. I’m all out of breath.

JACK It’s good for you, darling. It’s exercise.

(He takes the ice water.

NORA comes out of her room and goes bounding down the stairs)
NORA (Coldly) I’m going out. I won’t be having dinner.
I’ll be home late. I have my key. Good night.

KATE Nora! Don’t you want to see how your mother looks?

NORA I’m sure she looks beautiful. She doesn’t need me to tell her.

KATE What about Mr. Murphy? I know your mother wants him to meet you and Laurie. He’ll be here any minute.

NORA I have somebody waiting for me. I can meet Mr. Murphy some other time.

JACK I think it would be nice if you waited, Nora. I think your mother would be very hurt if you didn’t wait to say goodbye.

NORA I’m sure that’s very good advice, Uncle Jack. I know just how my mother feels. I’m not so sure she knows how I feel.

(She turns and goes out the front door. Jack and Kate look at each other)

KATE Jack! What’ll I do?

JACK Leave it alone. It’s between Nora and Blanche. It’s something they have to work out.

KATE Who is she going out with? Where does she go every night?

LAURIE With Larry Clurman. He borrows his father’s car and takes her to the cemetery.

KATE What cemetery?
ACT TWO

Laurie Where Daddy is buried. She goes to see Daddy.
   (Blanche has come out of her room and appears at the head of the stairs. She is all dressed up and looks quite lovely. She comes down the stairs)

Kate What'll I tell her? I don't want to spoil this evening for her.
   (Blanche appears in the room)

Blanche Jack? What are you doing down here?

Jack We have company coming. Where else should I be?

Blanche I looked in your room. I got scared to death.

Jack Well, you don't look it. You look beautiful.

Kate Ohh, Blanche. Oh, my God, Blanche, it's stunning. Like a movie star. Who's the movie star I like so much, Laurie?

Laurie Irene Dunne.

Kate Like Irene Dunne.

Laurie I think she looks like Rosalind Russell. Maybe Carole Lombard.

Jack I think she looks like Blanche. Blanche is prettier than all of them.

Blanche I had such trouble with the make-up. I couldn't see my eyes to put on the mascara. So I had to put my glasses on. Then I couldn't get the mascara on under the glasses.
   (Stanley gets up from his bed, goes out to the bathroom and closes the door)
KATE Where are your glasses? Have you got your glasses?

BLANCHE In my purse. I thought I'd put them on in the restaurant, when I'm looking at the menu.

KATE Make sure you do. I don't want you coming home telling me you don't know what he looks like.

BLANCHE I'm so glad to see you up, Jack. Then you're feeling better?

JACK It was nothing. I needed a rest, that's all. Besides, I wanted to meet this Murphy fella. A stranger comes in, he likes to meet another man. Makes him feel comfortable.

BLANCHE Thank you, Jack. That's very thoughtful of you.

KATE (Takes something out of her pocket) Here. Wear this. Don't say no to me. Just put them on, Blanche. Please.

BLANCHE Kate! Your pearls. Your good pearls.

KATE What are they going to do? Sit in my drawer all year? Pearls are like people. They like to go out and be seen once in a while.

BLANCHE You were going to wear them to the affair tonight. I'm so wrapped up in myself, I forgot you're missing the affair this year.

KATE I can afford to miss it. I don't see Jack there the whole night anyway.

JACK Let's see how they look.
ACT TWO

BLANCHE  I'm so nervous I'll lose them.
        (She puts them on. They all look)

KATE   All right. Tell me I don't have a beautiful sister.

JACK   Now I feel good. Now I feel I got my money's worth.

LAURIE Definitely Carole Lombard.

BLANCHE  Laurie, go up and get Nora. I want to show them to Nora.

BLANCHE  (Looks at KATE and JACK)  What do you mean, she left? Without saying goodbye?

KATE   She had to meet somebody. She wanted to wait for you.

BLANCHE  She could have come into my room. She knew I wanted to see her.

JACK   She'll see you when you get home. You'll look just as good at twelve o'clock.

BLANCHE  What did she say? Did she say anything?

KATE   You're going out. You're going to have a good time tonight. We'll talk about it later.

BLANCHE  She's making me pay for it, isn't she? She knows she can get to me so easily . . . That's what I get for making decisions.

JACK   I feel like ice cream for dessert. Laurie, you feel like ice cream for dessert?
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

LAURIE  Butter pecan?

JACK  Butter pecan for you, maple walnut for me. Go up and tell Eugene I want him to go to the store.

LAURIE  I'll go with him.

KATE  Don't run, darling.

JACK  Let her run. If she gets tired, she'll tell you. Let's stop worrying about each other so much.

(LAURIE knocks on EUGENE's door)

LAURIE  Eugene! Your father wants us to go to the store.

EUGENE  Tell him I'm sick. My stomach hurts.

LAURIE  You don't want any ice cream?

EUGENE (Thinks)  Ice cream? Wait a minute. (He sits up, looks out at the audience) It's amazing how quickly you recover from misery when someone offers you ice cream.

JACK  She's only sixteen, Blanche. At that age they're still wrapped up in themselves.

EUGENE  How am I going to become a writer if I don't know how to suffer? Actually, I'd give up writing if I could see a naked girl while I was eating ice cream.

(He comes out of his room and goes down the stairs with LAURIE. STANLEY comes out of the bathroom and goes back into his own room)

BLANCHE  What time is it?
ACT TWO

KATE Six-thirty. He'll be here any minute. Get your mind off Nora, Blanche. Don't wear my pearls out tonight for nothing.

JACK Eugene! Go to Hanson's. Get a half pint of butter pecan, a half pint of maple walnut, a half pint of chocolate for yourself. Kate, what do you want?

KATE I'm in no mood for ice cream.

JACK Get her vanilla. She'll eat it. And whatever Stanley likes.

EUGENE I need money.

JACK I just paid the doctor fifteen dollars. Go up to Stanley. He got paid today. Ask him for his salary.

EUGENE (In shock) What???

KATE Here. Here's a dollar. (She takes it out of her pocket) Hurry back so Laurie can meet Mr. Murphy. But don't run.

(They take the money and leave by the front door)

BLANCHE You know what I worry about at night? That she'll run off. That I'll wake up in the morning and she'll be gone. To Philadelphia. Or Boston. Or God knows where.

KATE Look how the woman's going out on a date. Is that what you're going to talk about? He'll start drinking in five minutes.

BLANCHE You think so? What'll I do if he gets drunk?
KATE  You’ll come right home. Do you have money? Do you have carfare?

BLANCHE  No. I didn’t take anything.

KATE  Wait here. I’ll get five dollars from Stanley. Now I have something else to worry about.

(She starts up the stairs)

JACK  I could use a cup of hot tea.

(He gets up)

BLANCHE  Sit there. I’ll make it.

JACK  We’ll both make it. Keep me company. We can hear the bell from the kitchen.

(They go off to the kitchen. KATE is at STANLEY’s door. She knocks on it)

KATE  Stanley? Are you in there? (She opens the door. STANLEY is lying on his bed) Open the window. You never get any air in this room . . . (She extends her hand)

I need five dollars for Aunt Blanche. (He stares at the floor) . . . Stanley? Did you get paid today?

STANLEY  Yes. I got paid today.

KATE  Take out your money for the week, let me have the envelope.

STANLEY (Still stares down)  I don’t have it.

KATE  You don’t have the envelope?

STANLEY  I don’t have the money.

KATE  What do you mean, you don’t have the money?
ACT TWO

STANLEY  I mean I don’t have the money. It’s gone.

KATE (Nervously, sits on the bed)  It’s gone? . . . Gone where?

STANLEY  It’s just gone. I don’t have it. I can’t get it back. I’m sorry. There’s nothing I can do about it anymore. Just don’t ask me any more questions.

KATE  What do you mean, don’t ask any more questions? I want to know what happened to seventeen dollars, Stanley!

STANLEY  You’ll tell Pop. If I tell you, you’re going to tell Pop.

KATE  Why shouldn’t I tell your father? Why, Stanley? I want to know what happened to that money.

STANLEY  I gambled it! I lost it playing poker! All right? You happy? You satisfied now?

(He starts to weep)

KATE (Her breath goes out of her body. She sits there numb, then finally takes a breath)  I’m not going to deal with this right now. I have to get Aunt Blanche out of the house first. I have your father’s health to worry about. You’re going to sit in this room and you’re going to think up a story. You were robbed. Somebody stole the money. I don’t care who, I don’t care where. That’s what you’re going to tell your father, because if you tell him the truth, you’ll kill that man as sure as I’m sitting here . . . Tonight, after he goes to sleep, you’ll meet me in the kitchen and we’ll deal with this alone.

(She gets up, moves to the door)
STANLEY (Barely audible) ... I'm sorry.
(She goes, closes the door. STANLEY sits there as if the life has gone out of him.
KATE walks down the stairs and into the living room. She goes over to the window, looks out and breaks into sobs.
BLANCHE comes out of the kitchen. She looks around the living room)

BLANCHE I left my purse in here. Without my glasses, I'm afraid to pour the tea. (She notices KATE wiping her eyes with her handkerchief) Kate? ... What is it? What's wrong?

KATE Nothing. I'm just all nerves today.

BLANCHE You're worried about Jack. He shouldn't have come down the stairs.

KATE He knows he's not supposed to get out of bed. What did we need a doctor for? He doesn't listen to them.

BLANCHE I shouldn't have asked Mr. Murphy to come over. That's the only reason he came down.

KATE It's not just Mr. Murphy. It's Stanley, it's Eugene, it's everybody.

BLANCHE I'm sorry about Nora. Jack told me what she said when she left.

KATE Why don't you get your purse, Blanche. He'll be here any minute.

BLANCHE Did Nora say anything to hurt you, Kate? I know she's been very difficult these last few days.
ACT TWO

KATE (Suddenly turns, angrily) Why is it always Nora? Why is it only your problems? Do you think you’re the only one in this world who has troubles? We all have troubles. We all get our equal share. (It bits BLANCHE like a slap in the face)

BLANCHE I’m sorry. Forgive me, Kate. I’m sorry.

KATE Maybe you’re stronger than I am, I don’t know. You survived Dave’s death. I don’t know if I could handle it if anything happens to Jack.

BLANCHE He’ll be all right, Kate. Nothing’s going to happen to him. He’s still a young man. He’s strong.

KATE When Dave died, I cried for his loss. I was so angry. Angry at God for taking such a young man . . . I never realized until now what you must have gone through. How did you get through it, Blanche?

KATE (Almost smiles) My children.

BLANCHE I wake up every morning for Nora and for Laurie.

KATE Nora hurts you so much and you can still say that?

BLANCHE Why? Don’t you think we hurt our parents? You don’t remember how Momma cried when Celia left home? Sure it hurts, but if you love someone, you forgive them.
KA T E Some things you forgive. Some things you never forgive.

(L A U R I E comes back into the house. She has a letter in her hand)

L A U R I E Is the ice cream here yet?

B L A N C H E No, darling. Didn’t you go with Eugene?

L A U R I E No. I was across the street in the creepy house. It’s just as creepy inside.

B L A N C H E In Mr. Murphy’s house? You were just in there? Why?

L A U R I E She called me from the window. The old lady. I think it’s his mother. She told me she had a letter for you. I had to go inside to get it.

(She hands the letter to BLA N C H E)

K A T E What did she say to you?

L A U R I E She offered me a cookie but it was all green. I said I wasn’t hungry.

(E U G E N E appears outside the house. He carries a brown paper bag with four small cartons of ice cream. BLA N C H E opens the letter)

E U G E N E (To the audience) "Dear Mrs. Morton, I send regrets for my son Frank. I tried to reach you earlier, then realized you had no phone. Frank will be unable to keep his dinner engagement with you this evening. Frank is in hospital as a result of an automobile accident last night, and although his injuries are not serious, the consequences are. As a devoted mother I would end this letter here and forward my apologies. Despite all my son’s faults, honesty and sincerity have never been his failings. He wanted me to tell you the truth. That while driving a friend’s motorcar, he was intoxicated and was the cause of the aforementioned accident. The truth would come out soon enough, but Frank has too much respect and fondness for you to have you hear it from some other source. I hope you will not think I am just a doting mother when I tell you my boy has a great many attributes. A great many. As soon as Frank can get out of his difficulties here we have decided to move to upstate New York where there is a clinic that can help Frank and where we have relatives with whom we can stay. Frank sends, along with his regrets, his regard for a warm, intelligent, friendly and most delightful neighbor across the way . . . Yours most respectfully, Mrs. Matthew Murphy.”

98

KATE What is it?
 (BLANCHE hands the letter to KATE)

BLANCHE He’s not coming. He’s . . . in the hospital.
 (KATE reads the letter)

EUGENE (To the audience) It was a sad letter, all right, but it sure was well written. Maybe I should have been born in Ireland.
 (He walks into the house)

KATE (As she reads) I knew it. I said it right from the beginning, didn’t I?

LAURIE Why is he in the hospital?
BLANCHE He was in a car accident... Oh, God. That poor woman.

LAURIE Does that mean you're not going out to dinner?

KATE (Nods her head as she finishes) It could have been you in that car with him. I warned you the first day about those people.

BLANCHE Stop calling them "those people." They're not "those people." She's a mother, like you and me.

KATE And what is he? Tell me what he is.

BLANCHE He's somebody in trouble. He's somebody that needs help. For God's sakes, Kate, you don't even know the man.

KATE I know the man. I know what they're all like.

BLANCHE Who are you to talk? Are we any better? Are we something so special? We're all poor around here, the least we can be is charitable.

KATE Why? What have I got I can afford to give away? Am I the one who got you all dressed up for nothing? Am I the one who got your hopes up? Am I the one they're going to lock up in a jail somewhere?

LAURIE They're going to put him in jail?

KATE Don't talk to me about charity. Anyone else, but not me.

BLANCHE I never said you weren't charitable.

KATE All I did was try to help you. All I ever did was try to help you.
ACT TWO

BLANCHE  I know that. Nobody cares for their family more than you do. But at least you can be sympathetic to somebody else in trouble.

KATE  Who should I care about? Who’s out there watching over me? I did enough in my life for people. You know what I’m talking about.

BLANCHE  No, I don’t. Say what’s on your mind, Kate. What people?

KATE  You! Celia! Poppa, when he was sick. Everybody! . . . Don’t you ask me “What people”? How many beatings from Momma did I get for things that you did? How many dresses did I go without so you could look like someone when you went out? I was the workhorse and you were the pretty one. You have no right to talk to me like that. No right.

BLANCHE  This is all about Jack, isn’t it? You’re blaming me for what happened.

KATE  Why do you think that man is sick today? Why did a policeman have to carry him home at two o’clock in the morning? So your Nora could have dancing lessons? So that Laurie could see a doctor every three weeks? Go on! Worry about your friend across the street, not the ones who have to be dragged home to keep a roof over your head.

(She turns away. JACK walks in from the kitchen)

JACK  What is this? What’s going on here?

BLANCHE (To KATE)  Why didn’t you ever tell me you felt that way?
KATE (Turns her back to her) I never had the time. I was too busy taking care of everyone.

JACK What is it, Blanche? What happened?
(She hands Jack the letter. He starts to read it)

BLANCHE It took all these years? It took something like that letter for you to finally get your feelings out?

KATE I didn’t need a letter . . . I just needed you to ask me.
(BLANCHE is terribly hurt and extremely vulnerable standing there)

BLANCHE Laurie! Please go upstairs. This conversation isn’t for you.

EUGENE The ice cream is ready.

BLANCHE Eugene, put the ice cream in the icebox. I have to talk to your mother.
(EUGENE goes into the kitchen)

JACK (Finishes the letter) I never spoke to the woman. They’ve lived in that house for three years, and I never exchanged a word with her.

KATE (To Jack) What are you walking around for? If you’re out of bed, at least sit in a chair.

BLANCHE If I could take Nora and Laurie and pack them out of this house tonight, I would do it. But I can’t. I have no place to take them.

JACK Blanche! What are you talking about? Don’t say such things.
ACT TWO

BLANCHE (Looks straight at KATE) If I can leave the girls with you for another few weeks, I would appreciate it. Until I can find a place of my own, and then I’ll send for them.

JACK You’re not sending for anybody and you’re not leaving anywhere. I don’t want to hear this kind of talk.

KATE Stay out of this, Jack. Let her do what she wants.

BLANCHE I know a woman in Manhattan Beach. I can stay with her for a few days. And then I’ll find a job. I will do anything anybody asks me, but I will never be a burden to anyone again.

(She starts for the stairs)

JACK Blanche, stop this! Stop it right now. What the hell is going on here, for God’s sakes? Two sisters having a fight they should have had twenty-five years ago. You want to get it out, Blanche, get it out! Tell her what it’s like to live in a house that isn’t yours. To have to depend on somebody else to put the food on your plate every night. I know what it’s like because I lived that way until I was twenty-one years old.... Tell her, Kate, what it is to be an older sister. To suddenly be the one who has to work and shoulder all the responsibilities and not be the one who gets the affection and the hugs when you were the only one there. You think I don’t see it with Stanley and Eugene? With Nora and Laurie? You think I don’t hear the fights that go on up in those rooms night after night? Go on, Kate! Scream at her! Yell at her. Call her names, Blanche. Tell her to go to hell for the first time in your life.... And when you both got it out of your systems, give each other a hug and go have dinner. My lousy ice cream is melting, for God's sakes.

(There is a long silence)

BLANCHE I love you both very much. No matter what Kate says to me, I will never stop loving her. But I have to get out. If I don't do it now, I will lose whatever self-respect I have left. For people like us, sometimes the only thing we really own is our dignity . . . and when I grow old, I would like to have as much as Mrs. Matthew Murphy across the street.

(She turns and goes up the stairs, disappearing into her room)

JACK What did it, Kate? Something terrible must have happened to you tonight for you to behave like this. It wasn't Blanche. It was something else. What was it, Kate?

KATE (Stares out the window) Tell the kids to come down in five minutes. We're eating in the kitchen tonight.

(She walks into the kitchen. JACK stands there, staring after her. EUGENE, coming out of the kitchen, passes his father)

JACK Get Stanley and Laurie. Dinner is in five minutes.

(Jack goes into the kitchen. Eugene walks to the stairs and up toward his bedroom)

EUGENE (To the audience) It was the first day in my life I didn't get blamed for what just happened. I felt real sorry for everybody, but as long as I wasn't to blame, I didn't feel all that bad about things. That's when I realized I had a selfish streak in me. I sure hope I grow out of it. (He enters his bedroom and says to STANLEY) Aunt Blanche is leaving.
ACT TWO

STANLEY (Sits up) For where?

EUGENE (Sits on his own bed) To stay with some woman in Manhattan Beach. She and Mom just had a big fight. She’s going to send for Laurie and Nora when she gets a job.

STANLEY What did they fight about?

EUGENE I couldn’t hear it all. I think Mom sorta blames Aunt Blanche for Pop having to work so hard.

STANLEY (Hits the pillow with his fist) Oh, God! . . . Did Mom say anything about me? About how I lost my salary?

EUGENE You told her? Why did you tell her? I came up with twelve terrific lies for you.

(stanley opens his drawer, puts on a sweater)

STANLEY How much money do you have?

EUGENE Me? I don’t have any money.

STANLEY (Puts another sweater over the first one) The hell you don’t. You’ve got money in your cigar box. How much do you have?

EUGENE I got a dollar twelve. It’s my life’s savings.

STANLEY Let me have it. I’ll pay it back, don’t worry.

(He puts a jacket over the sweaters, then gets a fedora from the closet and puts it on. EUGENE takes the cigar box from under the bed, opens it)
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

EUGENE What are you putting on all those things for?

STANLEY In case I have to sleep out tonight. I’m leaving, Gene. I don’t know where I’m going yet, but I’ll write to you when I get there.

EUGENE You’re leaving home?

STANLEY When I’m gone, you tell Aunt Blanche what happened to my salary. Then she’ll know why Mom was so angry. Tell her please not to leave, because it was all my fault, not Mom’s. Will you do that?

(He takes the coins out of the cigar box)

EUGENE I have eight cents’ worth of stamps, if you want that too.

STANLEY Thanks. (He picks up a small medal) What’s this?

EUGENE The medal you won for the hundred-yard dash two years ago.

STANLEY From the Police Athletic League. I didn’t know you still had this.

EUGENE You gave it to me. You can have it back if you want it.

STANLEY It’s not worth anything.

EUGENE It is to me.

STANLEY Sure. You can keep it.

EUGENE Thanks . . . Where will you go?

STANLEY I don’t know. I’ve been thinking about joining the Army. Pop says we’ll be at war in a couple of years anyway. I could be a sergeant or something by the time it starts.
ACT TWO

EUGENE  If it lasts long enough, I could join too. Maybe we can get in the same outfit. “The Fighting 69th.” It’s mostly Irish, but they had a few Jewish guys in the movie.

STANLEY  You don’t go in the Army unless they come and get you. You go to college. You hear me? Promise me you’ll go to college.

EUGENE  I’ll probably have to stay home and work if you leave. We’ll need the money.

STANLEY  I’ll send home my paycheck every month. A sergeant in the Army makes real good dough . . . Well, I better get going.

EUGENE (On the verge of tears)  What do you have to leave for?

STANLEY  Don’t start crying. They’ll hear you.

EUGENE  They’ll get over it. They won’t stay mad at you forever. I was mad at you and I got over it.

STANLEY  Because of me, the whole family is breaking up. Do you want Nora to end up like one of those cheap boardwalk girls?

EUGENE  I don’t care. I’m not in love with Nora anymore.

STANLEY  Well, you should care. She’s your cousin. Don’t turn out to be like me.

EUGENE  I don’t see what’s so bad about you.
STANLEY (Looks at him) Take care of yourself, Eug.
(They embrace. He opens the door, looks around, then back to EUGENE) If you ever write a story about me, call me Hank. I always liked the name Hank.
(He goes, closing the door behind him.)

EUGENE sits there in silence for a while, then turns to the audience

EUGENE I guess there comes a time in everybody’s life when you say, “This very moment is the end of my childhood.” When Stanley closed the door, I knew that moment had come to me . . . I was scared. I was lonely. And I hated my mother and father for making him so unhappy. Even if they were right, I still hated them . . . I even hated Stanley a little because he left me there to grow up all by myself.

KATE (Yelling) Eugene! Laurie! It’s dinner. I’m not waiting all night.

EUGENE (To the audience) And I hated her for leaving Stanley’s name out when she called us for dinner. I don’t think parents really know how cruel they can be sometimes . . . (A beat) At dinner I tried to tell them about Stanley, but I just couldn’t get the words out . . . I left the table without even having my ice cream . . . If it was suffering I was after, I was beginning to learn about it.

(KATE and JACK come out of the kitchen, heading upstairs)

JACK It’s ten o’clock, where is Stanley so late?
ACT TWO

KATE  Never mind Stanley. You should have been in bed an hour ago.

JACK  Why won’t you tell me what happened between you and that boy?

KATE  I’m tired, Jack. I’ve had enough to deal with for one day.

JACK  I want him to go to temple with me on Saturday. They stop going for three or four weeks, they forget their religion altogether.

(They go into the bedroom)

EUGENE  The house became quieter than I ever heard it before. Aunt Blanche was in her room packing, Pop and Mom were in their bedroom, and I had to talk to somebody or else I’d go crazy. I didn’t have much choice. (He walks over to her room and knocks on the door) Laurie? It’s Eugene. Can I come in?

LAURIE  What do you want? I’m reading.

EUGENE (Opens the door)  I just want to talk to you.

LAURIE  I didn’t say yes, did I?

EUGENE  Well, I’m already in, so it’s too late . . . What are you reading?

LAURIE  The Citadel by A. J. Cronin.

EUGENE  I read it. It’s terrific . . . I hear your mother’s leaving in the morning.

LAURIE  We’re going too as soon as she finds a job.
EUGENE  I can’t believe it. I’m going to be the only one left here.

LAURIE  You mean you and Stanley.

EUGENE  Stanley’s gone. He’s not coming back. I think he’s going to join the Army.

LAURIE  You mean he ran away?

EUGENE  No. Only kids run away. When you’re Stanley’s age, you just leave.

LAURIE  He didn’t say goodbye?

EUGENE  My parents don’t even know about it. I’m going to tell them now.

LAURIE  I wonder if I’ll have to go to a different school.

EUGENE  You’ll have to make all new friends.

LAURIE  I don’t care. I don’t have any friends here anyway.

EUGENE  Because you’re always in the house. You never go out.

LAURIE  I can’t because of my condition.

EUGENE  You don’t look sick to me. Do you feel sick?

LAURIE  No. But my mother tells me I am.

EUGENE  I don’t trust parents anymore.

LAURIE  Why would she lie to me?

EUGENE  To keep you around. Once they find out Stanley’s gone, they’re going to handcuff me to my bed.
ACT TWO

LAURIE I wouldn't leave my mother anyway. Even when I'm older. Even if I get married. I'll never leave my mother.

EUGENE Yeah? Mr. Murphy across the street never left his mother. And he ended up going to jail.

LAURIE None of this would have happened if my father was alive.

EUGENE How did you feel when he died?

LAURIE I don’t remember. I cried a lot because I saw my mother crying.

EUGENE I would hate it if my father died. Especially with Stanley gone. We'd probably have to move out of this house.

LAURIE Well... then you and your mother could come and live with us.

EUGENE So if we all end up living together, what's the point in breaking up now?

LAURIE I don’t know. I have to finish reading.

(She goes back to her book. EUGENE gets up and looks at the audience)

EUGENE You don’t get too far talking to Laurie. Sometimes I think the flutter in her heart is really in her brain. (He leaves the room, closes the door and heads down the stairs) I went into their bedroom and broke the news about Stanley. The monumental news that their eldest son had run off, probably to get killed in France fighting for his country. My mother said, “Go to bed. He’ll be home when it gets cold out.” I couldn’t believe it. Their own son. It was then that I suspected that Stanley and I were adopted ... They finally went to bed and I waited out on the front steps until it got cold, but Stanley never showed up.

(He goes out the front door.

It is later that night, after midnight. We see Nora enter the front yard. Blanche comes down the stairs in a nightgown and a robe. She waits at the foot of the stairs as Nora comes into the house and sees her)

Blanche I wanted to talk to you.

Nora Now? It's late.

Blanche I know it's late. We could have talked earlier if you didn't come home at twelve o'clock at night.

(Blanche walks into the living room. Nora follows her in and stands in the doorway)

Nora How was your dinner?

Blanche I didn't go. Mr. Murphy was in an accident.

Nora I'm sorry. Is he all right?

Blanche He's got his problems, like the rest of us ... I was very hurt that you left tonight without saying goodbye.

Nora I was late. Someone was waiting for me.

Blanche So was I. You knew it was important to me.

Nora I'm not feeling very well.
ACT TWO

BLANCHE You purposely left without seeing me. You've never done that before.

NORA Can we talk about this in the morning?

BLANCHE I won't be here in the morning.

NORA Then tomorrow night.

BLANCHE I'm leaving, Nora. I'm moving out in the morning.

NORA What are you talking about?

BLANCHE Aunt Kate and I had a fight tonight. We said some terrible things to each other. Things that have been bottled up since we were children. I'm going to stay with my friend Louise in Manhattan Beach until I can find a job. Then I'll send for you and Laurie.

NORA I can't believe it. You mean it's all right for you to leave us but it wasn't all right for me to leave you?

BLANCHE I was never concerned about your leaving me. It was your future I was worrying about.

NORA It was my future. Why couldn't I have something to say about it?

BLANCHE Maybe I was wrong, I don't know. I never made the decisions for the family. Your father did. Aunt Kate was right about one thing: everyone always took care of me. My mother, my sisters, your father, even you and Laurie. I've been a very dependent person all my life.
NORA  Maybe that's all I'm asking for. To be independent.

BLANCHE (Sternly)  You earn your independence. You don’t take it at the expense of others. Would that job even be offered to you if somebody in this family hadn’t paid for those dancing lessons and kept a roof over your head and clothes on your back? If anyone’s going to pay back Uncle Jack, it’ll be me—doing God knows what, I don’t know—but one thing I’m sure of. I’ll steal before I let my daughter show that man one ounce of ingratitude or disrespect.

NORA  So I have to give up the one chance I may never get again, is that it? I’m the one who has to pay for what you couldn’t do with your own life.

BLANCHE (Angrily)  What right do you have to judge me like that?

NORA  Judge you? I can’t even talk to you. I don’t exist to you. I have tried so hard to get close to you but there was never any room. Whatever you had to give went to Daddy, and when he died, whatever was left you gave to—

(She turns away)

BLANCHE  What? Finish what you were going to say.

NORA  ... I have been jealous my whole life of Laurie because she was lucky enough to be born sick. I could never turn a light on in my room at night or read in bed because Laurie always needed her precious sleep. I could never have a friend over on the weekends because Laurie was always resting. I used to pray I’d get some terrible disease or get hit by a car so I'd have a leg all twisted or crippled and then once, maybe just once, I'd get to crawl into bed next to you on a cold rainy night and talk to you and hold you until I fell asleep in your arms . . . just once . . .
ACT TWO

(She is in tears)

BLANCHE My God, Nora . . . is that what you think of me?

NORA Is it any worse than what you think of me?

BLANCHE (Hesitates, trying to recover) I'm not going to let you hurt me, Nora. I'm not going to let you tell me that I don't love you or that I haven't tried to give you as much as I gave Laurie . . . God knows I'm not perfect, because enough angry people in this house told me so tonight. But I am not going to be a doormat for all the frustrations and unhappiness that you or Aunt Kate or anyone else wants to lay at my feet . . . I did not create this universe. I do not decide who lives and dies, or who's rich or poor or who feels loved and who feels deprived. If you feel cheated that Laurie gets more than you, then I feel cheated that I had a husband who died at thirty-six. And if you keep on feeling that way, you'll end up like me—with something much worse than loneliness or helplessness and that's self-pity. Believe me, there is no leg that's twisted or bent that is more crippling than a human being who thrives on his own misfortunes . . . I am sorry, Nora, that you feel unloved and I will do everything I can to change it except apologize for it. I am tired of apologizing. After a while it becomes your life's work and it doesn't bring any money into the house. If it's taken your pain and Aunt Kate’s anger to get me to start living again, then God will give me the strength to make it up to you, but I will not go back to being that frightened, helpless woman that I created! I’ve already buried someone I love. Now it’s time to bury someone I hate.

NORA I didn’t ask you to hate yourself. I just asked you to love me.

BLANCHE I do, Nora. Oh, God, why can’t I make that clear to you?

NORA I feel so terrible.

BLANCHE Why?

NORA Because I think I hurt you and I still want that job with Mr. Beckman.

BLANCHE I know you do.

NORA But I can’t have it, can I?

BLANCHE How can I answer that without you thinking I’m still depriving you?

NORA I don’t know . . . Maybe you just did.

BLANCHE I hope so, Nora. I pray to God it’s so.

(KATE is coming down the stairs)

KATE I heard voices downstairs. I didn’t know who it was.

BLANCHE I’m sorry if we woke you . . . Go on up to bed, Nora. We’ll talk again in the morning.

NORA All right . . . Good night, Aunt Kate.

(NORA goes upstairs)
ACT TWO

KATE Is she all right?

BLANCHE Yes.

KATE She's not angry anymore?

BLANCHE No, Kate. No one's angry anymore. (NORA goes into the bedroom) I just explained everything to Nora. The girls will help you with all the housework while I'm gone. Laurie's strong enough to do her share. I've kept her being a baby long enough.

KATE They've never been any trouble to me, those girls. Never.

BLANCHE I'll try to take them on the weekends if I can . . . It's late. We could both use a good night's sleep.

(She starts out of the room)

KATE Blanche! Don't go! (BLANCHE stops) I feel badly enough for what I said. Don't make me feel any worse.

BLANCHE Everything you said to me tonight was true, Kate. I wish to God you'd said it years ago.

KATE What would I do without you? Who else do I have to talk to all day? What friends do I have in this neighborhood? Even the Murphys across the street are leaving.

BLANCHE You and I never had any troubles before tonight, Kate. And as God is in heaven, there'll never be an angry word between us again . . . It's the girls I'm thinking of now. We have to be together. The three of us. It's what they want as much as I do.
KATE All right. I'm not saying you shouldn't have it. But you're not going to find a job overnight. Apartments are expensive. While you're looking, why do you have to live with strangers in Manhattan Beach?

BLANCHE Louise isn't a stranger. She's a good friend.

KATE To me good friends are strangers. But sisters are sisters.

BLANCHE I'm afraid of becoming comfortable here. If I don't get out now, when will I ever do it?

KATE The door is open. Go whenever you want. When you got the job, when you find the apartment, I'll help you move. I can look with you. I know how to bargain with these landlords.

BLANCHE (Smiles) You wouldn't mind doing that?

KATE They see a woman all alone, they take advantage of you . . . I'll find out what they're asking for the Murphy place. It couldn't be expensive, she never cleaned it.

BLANCHE How independent can I become if I live right across the street from you?

KATE Far enough away for you to close your own door, and close enough for me not to feel so lonely.

(Blanche looks at her with great affection, walks over to Kate and embraces her. They hold on dearly)

BLANCHE If I lived on the moon, you would still be close to me, Kate.
ACT TWO

KATE I'll tell Jack. He wouldn't go to sleep until I promised to come up with some good news.

BLANCHE I suddenly feel so hungry.

KATE Of course. You haven't had dinner. Come on. I'll fix you some scrambled eggs.

(She heads toward the kitchen)

BLANCHE I'll make them. I'm an independent woman now.

KATE With your eyes, you'll never get the eggs in the pan.

(They walk into the kitchen.
EUGENE appears in the front yard. He is carrying two bags of groceries. It is late afternoon. He stops to talk to the audience)

EUGENE So Aunt Blanche decided to stay while she was looking for a job. Nora went back to school the next morning, gave me a big smile and her legs looked as creamy-white as ever. Laurie was asked to take out the garbage but she quickly got a "flutter" in her heart, so I had to do it. Life was back to normal.

(He goes into the house. KATE comes out of the kitchen)

KATE Eugene! Go back to Greenblatt's. I need flour.

EUGENE How much? A teaspoonful? (She glares at him, takes the bags and goes back into the kitchen. He turns to the audience) Stanley didn't come home that night, and even though Mom didn't say anything, I knew she was plenty worried. She told Pop how Stanley lost the money playing poker, and from the sounds coming out of their room, I figured Stanley should forget about the Army and try for the Foreign Legion. (Stanley appears down the street) And then all of a sudden, the next night about dinnertime, he came back. I was never so happy to see anyone in my whole life.

Stanley Hi! (He looks around) Where's Mom and Pop?

Eugene Mom's in the kitchen cooking. Pop's upstairs with his prayer book. They figured if God didn't bring you home, maybe her potato pancakes would... What happened? Did you join up?

Stanley I came pretty close. I passed the physical one two three.

Eugene I knew you would.

Stanley They were giving me cigarettes, doughnuts, the whole sales pitch. I mean, they really wanted me.

Eugene I'll bet.

Stanley But then, just as I was about to sign my name, I stopped cold. I put down the pen and said, "I'm sorry. Maybe some other time"—and walked out.

Eugene How come?

Stanley I couldn't do it to Pop. Right now he needs me more than the Army does... I knew Mom didn't really mean it when she said she'd never forgive me for losing the money, but if I walked out on the family now, maybe she never would.
ACT TWO

EUGENE  Gee, I thought you'd be halfway to training camp by now . . . but I'm real glad you're home, Stan.
(They stand there looking at each other for a moment as KATE walks out of the kitchen to the yard)

KATE  Eugene. I need a pint of sweet cream. And some more sugar.

EUGENE  Stanley's home.

STANLEY  Hello, Mom.

KATE  (Looks at him, then to EUGENE)  Get a two-pound bag. I want to bake a chocolate cake.

EUGENE  A two-pound bag from Greenblatt's? I'll need identification.
(He looks at STANLEY, then goes)

KATE  (To STANLEY)  Are you staying for dinner?

STANLEY  I'm staying as long as you'll let me stay.

KATE  Why wouldn't I let you stay?? This is your home.
(kate walks into the house, STANLEY follows. Jack comes down the stairs and goes over to his favorite chair. He opens up his paper) Your father's been very worried. I think you owe him some sort of explanation.

STANLEY  I was just about to do that. (KATE looks at him, wants to reach out to touch him, but can't seem to do it. She goes back into the kitchen as STANLEY walks into the living room) Hi, Pop. How you feeling? (JACK doesn't turn. He keeps reading his newspaper) I'm sorry about not coming home last night . . . I know it was wrong. I just didn't know how to tell you about the money. I know it doesn’t help to say I’ll never do it again, because I won’t. I swear. Never . . . (He takes money out of his pocket) I’ve got three dollars. Last night I went over to Dominick’s Bowling Alley and I set pins till midnight and I could make another six on the weekend, so that makes nine. I’ll get the seventeen dollars back, Pop, I promise . . . I’m not afraid of hard work. That’s the one thing you taught me. Hard work and principles. That’s the code I’m going to live by for the rest of my life . . . So—if you have anything you want to say to me, I’d be very glad to listen.

(He stands there and waits)

JACK (Still looking at the paper) Did you read the paper tonight, Stanley?

STANLEY No, Pop.

JACK There’s going to be a war. A terrible war, Stanley.

STANLEY I know, Pop.

(He moves into the room, faces his father)

JACK The biggest war the world has ever seen. And it frightens me. We’re still not over the last one yet, and already they’re starting another one.

STANLEY We don’t talk about it much in the store because of Mr. Stroheim being German and all.

JACK My brother, Michael, was killed in the last war. I’ve told you that.

STANLEY You showed me his picture in uniform.
ACT TWO

JACK He was nineteen years old. The day he left, he didn’t look any older than Eugene. He was killed the second week he was overseas . . .

STANLEY I know.

JACK They didn’t take me because I was sixteen years old, both parents were dead, and I lived with my Aunt Rose and Uncle Maury. They had two sons in the Navy, both of them wounded, both of them decorated.

STANLEY Uncle Leon and Uncle Paul, right?

JACK (Nods) My brother would have been forty years old this month. He was a handsome boy. Good athlete, good dancer, good everything. I idolized him. Like Eugene idolizes you.

STANLEY No, he doesn’t.

JACK He does, believe me. I hear him outside, talking to his friends. “My brother this, my brother that” . . .
Brothers can talk to each other the way fathers and sons never do . . . I never knew a thing about girls until my brother taught me. Isn’t it like that with you and Eugene?

STANLEY Yeah, I tell him a few things.

JACK That’s good. I’m glad you’re so close . . . I missed all that when Michael went away. That’s why I’m glad you didn’t do anything foolish last night. I was afraid maybe you’d run away. I hear you talking with Eugene sometimes about the Army. That day will come soon enough, I’m afraid.
BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

STANLEY I did think about it. It was on my mind.

JACK Don’t you know, Stanley, there’s nothing you could ever do that was so terrible, I couldn’t forgive you. I know why you gambled. I know how terrible you feel. It was foolish, you know that already. I’ve lost money gambling in my time, I know what it’s like.

STANLEY You did?

JACK You’re so surprised? You think your father’s a perfect human being? Someday I’ll tell you some other things I did that wasn’t so perfect. Not even your mother knows. If you grow up thinking I was perfect, you’ll hate yourself for every mistake you ever make. Don’t be so hard on yourself. That’s what you’ve got a mother and father to do.

STANLEY You’re not hard on me. You’re always fair.

JACK I try to be. You’re a good son, Stanley. You don’t even realize that. We have men in our cutting room who haven’t spoken to their sons in five, six years. Boys who have no respect for anyone, including themselves; who haven’t worked a day in their lives, or who’ve brought their parents a single day’s pleasure. Thank God, I could never say that about you, Stanley.

STANLEY I gambled away seventeen dollars and you’re telling me how terrific I am.

JACK Hey, wait a minute. Don’t get the wrong idea. If you were home last night when your mother told me, I would have thrown you and your clothes out the window. Today I’m calmer. Today I read the newspaper. Today I’m afraid for all of us.

ACT TWO

STANLEY I understand.

JACK After dinner tonight, you apologize to your mother and give her the three dollars.

STANLEY I will.

JACK And apologize to your Aunt Blanche because she was worried about you too.

STANLEY I will.

JACK And you can thank your brother as well. He came into my bedroom this afternoon and told me how badly you felt. He was almost in tears himself. The way he pleaded your case, I thought I had Clarence Darrow in the room.

STANLEY Eugene’s a terrific kid.

JACK All right. Go wash up and get ready for dinner. And tonight, you and I are going to go out in the backyard and I’m going to teach you how to play poker.

STANLEY (Smiles) Terrific!

(He turns to go when KATE comes out of the kitchen)

KATE Is Eugene back yet?

STANLEY No, Mom.

KATE You look tired. Did you get any sleep?

STANLEY I got enough. I slept at a friend’s house. Can I talk to you after dinner, Mom?

KATE Where am I going? To a night club?

125
STANLEY  I'll wash up and be right down.
       (He turns and starts up the stairs)

KATE  Stanley! You didn’t join anything, did you?

STANLEY  No, Mom.

KATE  You’ve got time yet. The family’s growing up fast enough.

STANLEY  Yes, Mom.
       (He turns and rushes up the stairs. KATE turns and looks at JACK)

JACK  It’s all right. Everything is all right.

KATE  Who said it wasn’t? Didn’t I say he’d be home?
      (She calls up) Laurie! Call your sister. Time to set the table.
       (EUGENE comes running into the house with a small bag and some letters)

EUGENE (Out of breath)  I just broke the world’s record to Greenblatt’s. Next year I’m entering the Grocery Store Olympics. Here’s some mail for you, Pop.

KATE  Is that my sweet cream?

EUGENE  Never spilled a drop. The perfect run. (She takes the bag and goes into the kitchen) Where’s Stanley?

JACK (Takes the mail)  He’s cleaning up. (He looks at the mail) Oh, my God, I’ve got jury duty next week.
       (He sits and opens up a letter. EUGENE rushes up the stairs and runs into his room. STANLEY is taking off his two sweaters)
ACT TWO

EUGENE (Closing the door)  Are you back in the family?

STANLEY  Yeah. Everything's great.

EUGENE  Terrific . . . You want to take a walk on the boardwalk tonight? See what's doing?

STANLEY  I can't tonight. I'm busy.

EUGENE  Doing what?

STANLEY  I'm playing poker.

EUGENE  Poker? Are you serious?

STANLEY  Yeah. Right after dinner.

EUGENE  I don't believe you.

STANLEY  I swear to God! I got a poker game tonight.

EUGENE  You're crazy! You're genuinely crazy, Stanley . . . If you lose, I'm not sticking up for you this time.

STANLEY  If you don't tell anybody, I'll give you a present.

EUGENE  What kind of present?

STANLEY  Are you going to tell?

EUGENE  No. What's my present?

(STANLEY takes something wrapped in a piece of paper out of his jacket and hands it to EUGENE)

STANLEY  Here. It's for you. Don't leave it lying around the room.

(EUGENE starts to open it. It's postcard size)
EUGENE What is it?

STANLEY Open it slowly. (EUGENE does) Slower than that... Close your eyes. (EUGENE does. It is unwrapped) Now look!

(EUGENE looks. His eyes almost pop out)

EUGENE OH, MY GOD!! ... SHE'S NAKED! YOU CAN SEE EVERYTHING!!

STANLEY Lower your voice. You want to get caught with a thing like that?

EUGENE Where did you get it? Who is she?

STANLEY She's French. That's how all the women are in Paris.

EUGENE I can't believe I'm looking at this? You mean some girl actually posed for this? She just lay there and let some guy take a picture?

(BLANCHE comes out of the kitchen)

BLANCHE Laurie! Nora! Time for dinner.

(The girls come out of their room)

STANLEY It belongs to the guy who owes me two and a half bucks. I can keep it until he pays me back.

EUGENE Don't take the money. Let him keep it for a while.

(He lies back on the bed, staring at the picture. Nora and Laurie go down the stairs as Kate comes out of the kitchen with plates and starts to set up the table)
ACT TWO

STANLEY That's my appreciation for being a good buddy.

EUGENE Anytime you need a favor, just let me know.

STANLEY Put it in a safe spot . . . Come on. It's dinner.

EUGENE In a minute. I'll be down in a minute.

(He lies there, eyes transfixed. STANLEY starts down the stairs. NORA and LAURIE set out napkins and utensils. BLANCHE starts to arrange the chairs.

JACK, with a letter in his hand, gets up, looking excited, walks into the dining room)

JACK Kate? Where's Kate?

KATE Don't run. You're always running.

JACK (Holds up the letter) It's a letter from London. My cousin Sholem got out. They got out of Poland. They're free, Kate!

BLANCHE Thank God!

JACK His wife, his mother, all four children. They're sailing for New York tomorrow. They'll be here in a week.

KATE In a week?

LAURIE Do they speak English?

JACK I don't think so. A few words, maybe. (To KATE) They had to sell everything. They took only what they could carry.
STANLEY  Where will they stay?

JACK  Well, I'll have to discuss it with the family. Some with Uncle Leon, Uncle Paul—

KATE  With us. We can put some beds in the dining room. It's easier to eat in the kitchen anyway.

BLANCHE  The little ones can stay with Laurie. Nora can sleep with me—can't you, dear?

NORA (Pleased)  Of course, Momma.

STANLEY  Don't worry about money, Pa. I'm going to hit Mr. Stroheim for that raise.

JACK  They got out. That's all that's important. They got out.

(JACK sits down at the table to reread the letter. NORA, STANLEY and LAURIE look over his shoulder. BLANCHE and KATE set the table)

KATE (Yells up)  Eugene! We're all waiting for you!

EUGENE (Calls down)  Be right there! I just have to write down something. (He looks at photo again, then picks up fountain pen and his memoir book and reads as he begins to write) "October the second, six twenty-five p.m. A momentous moment in the life of I, Eugene Morris Jerome. I have seen the Golden Palace of the Himalayas . . . Puberty is over. Onward and upwards!"

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Since 1960, a Broadway season without a Neil Simon comedy or musical has been a rare one. His first play was Come Blow Your Horn, followed by the musical Little Me. During the 1966–67 season, Barefoot in the Park, The Odd Couple, Sweet Charity and The Star-Spangled Girl were all running simultaneously; in the 1970–71 season, Broadway theatergoers had their choice of Plaza Suite, Last of the Red Hot Lovers and Promises, Promises. Next came The Gingerbread Lady, The Prisoner of Second Avenue, The Sunshine Boys, The Good Doctor, God's Favorite, California Suite, Chapter Two, They're Playing Our Song, I Ought to Be in Pictures, Fools, and most recently, a revival of Little Me.

Neil Simon began his writing career in television, writing The Phil Silvers Show and Sid Caesar's Your Show of Shows. Mr. Simon has also written for the screen: the adaptations of Barefoot in the Park, The Odd Couple, Plaza Suite, The Prisoner of Second Avenue, The Sunshine Boys, California Suite, Chapter Two, and most recently, I Ought to Be in Pictures. His other screenplays include The Out-of-Towners, The Heartbreak Kid, Murder by Death, The Goodbye Girl, The Cheap Detective, Seems Like Old Times, Only When I Laugh and Max Dugan Returns.

The author lives in California and New York. He has two daughters, Ellen and Nancy.
“HUMOROUS AND POIGNANT—SOMETHING TO CELEBRATE! NEIL SIMON’S LOVE LETTER TO HIS PAST. . . . BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS BELONGS TO THE FAMILY GENRE WHERE THE PASSWORDS ARE FORGIVE AND REMEMBER.”
—Time

Meet Eugene Jerome and his family, fighting the hard times and sometimes each other—with laughter, tears, and love. It is 1937 in Brooklyn during the heart of the Depression. Fifteen-year-old Eugene Jerome lives in Brighton Beach with his family. He is witty, perceptive, obsessed with sex, and forever fantasizing his baseball-diamond triumphs as star pitcher for the New York Yankees. As our guide through his “memoirs,” Eugene takes us through a series of trenchant observations and insights that show his family meeting life’s challenges with pride, spirit, and a marvelous sense of humor. But as World War II looms ever closer, Eugene sees his own innocence slipping away as the first important era of his life ends—and a new one begins.

“Neil Simon’s richest play.”

“Simon’s finest play . . . a joyful, loving, and hilarious comedy.”
